To be Alive

To know the exhilaration
Of inexhaustable spirit,
To possess youth's
Undaunted dreams;
Eagerly to look forward
To each new experience
And know the feeling
Of lasting friendships;
To enjoy being young.

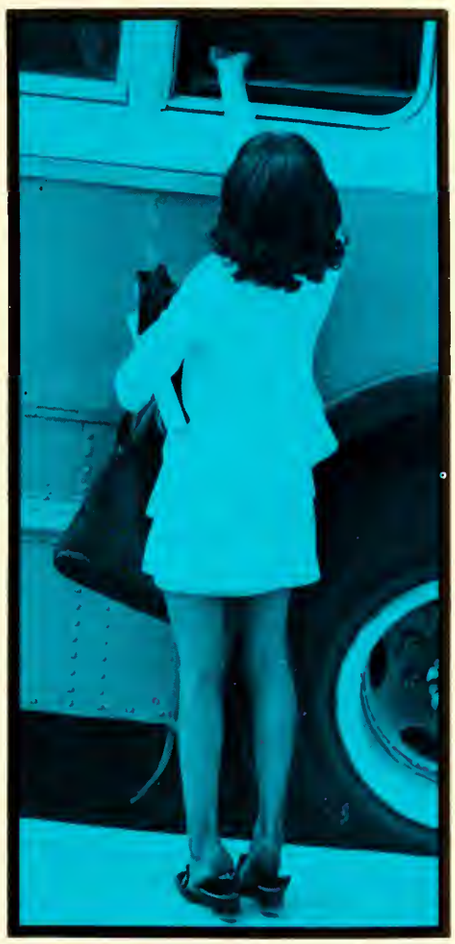

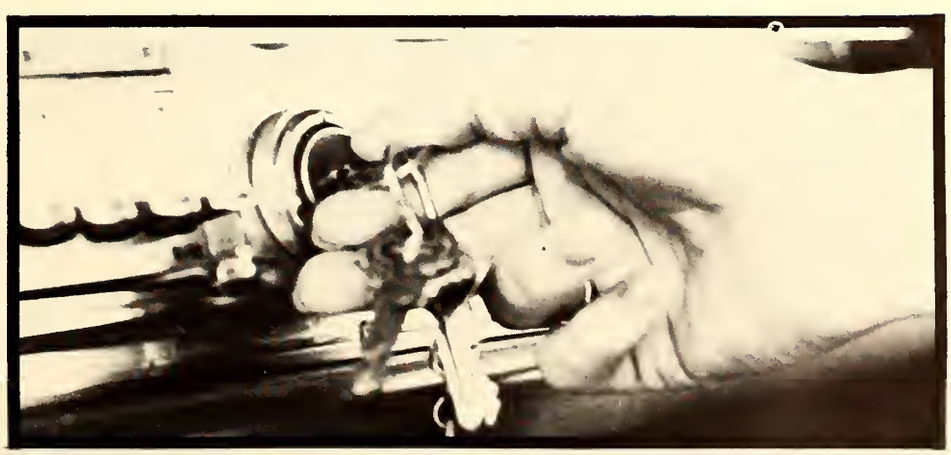

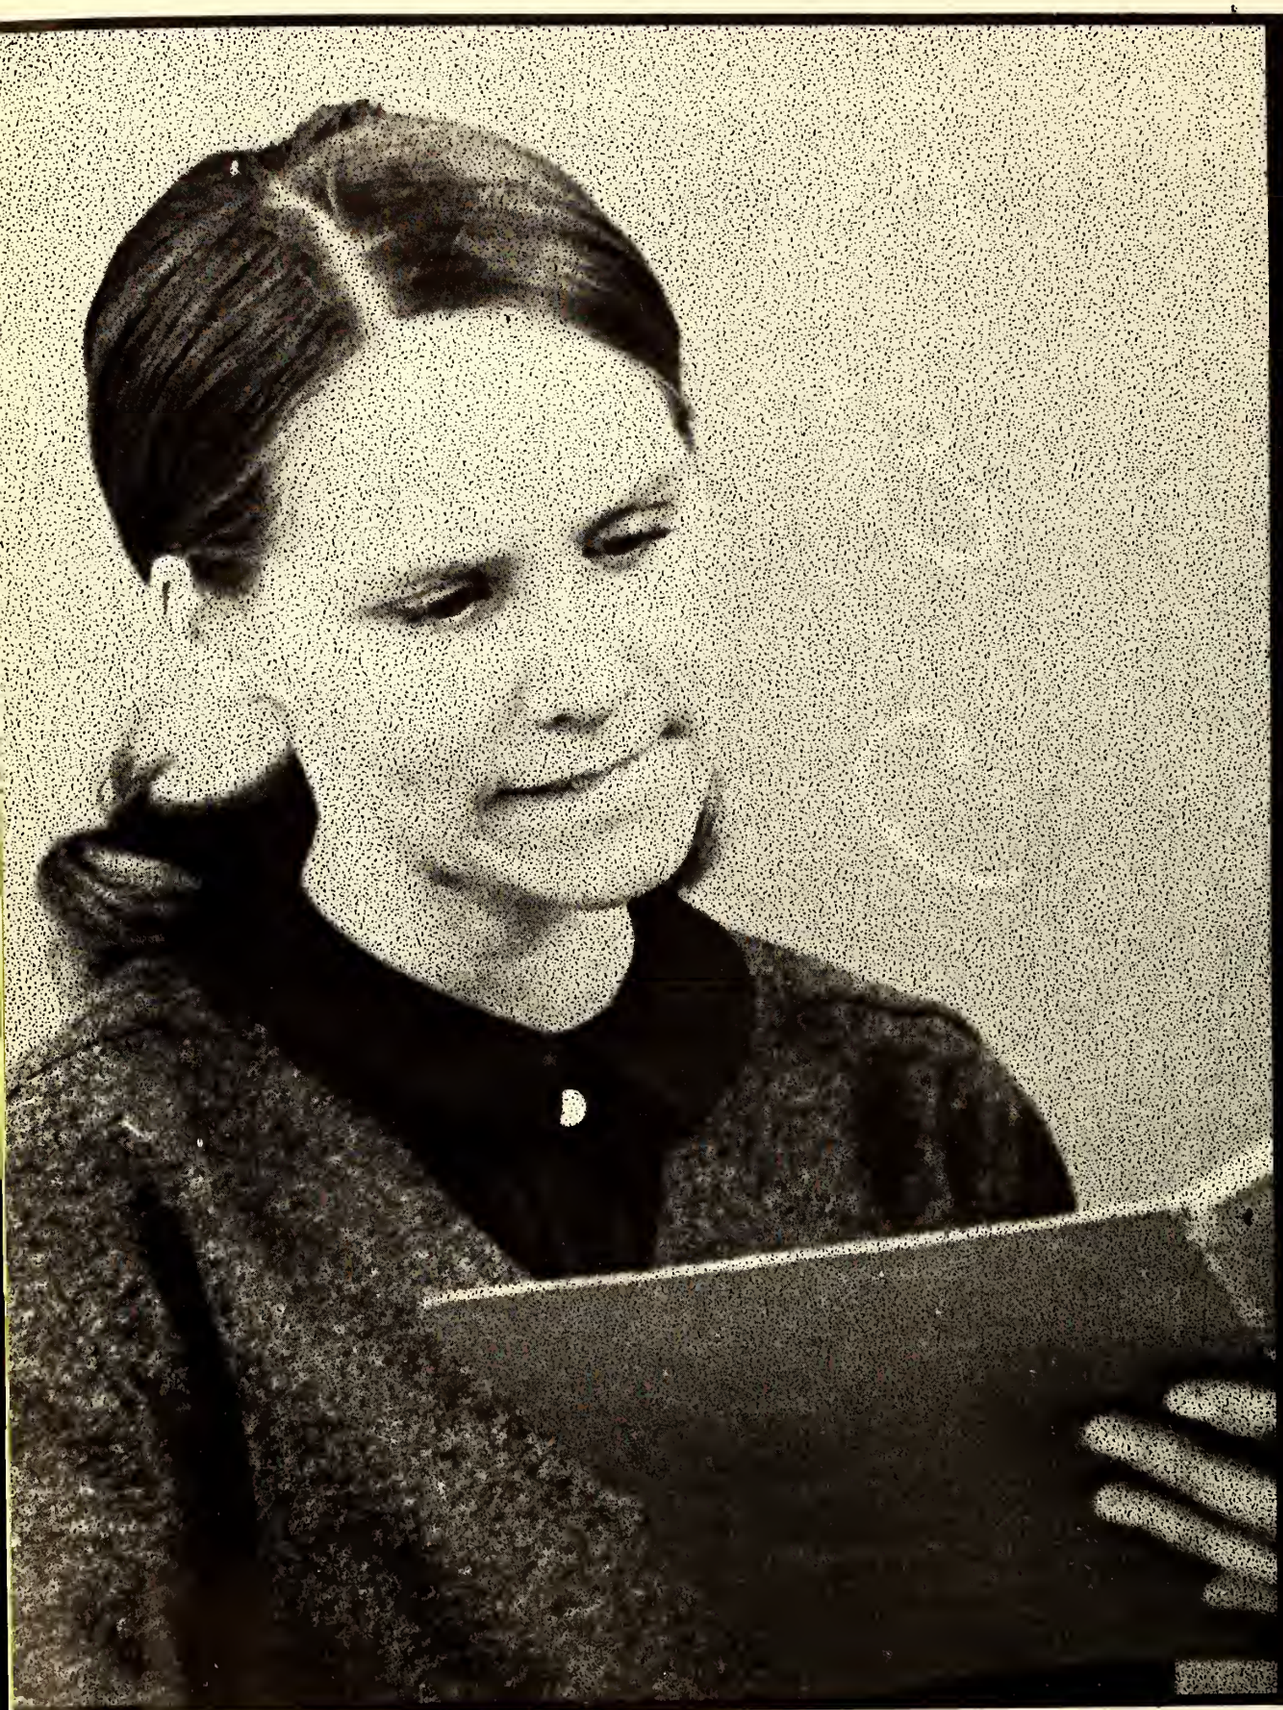

To Grasp IN dependence

To grasp for a moment
The illusion
Of independence,
To have it quickly slip
From clutching fingers
As Dad reaches out
For the car keys.
To brag to the family
About that first salary
As Mom generously heaps
A second helping.
To make plans carefully
For an evening out,
Knowing the restrictions
Of an 11 o'clock curfew.
To line up for admission
At an "X" rated movie
And guiltily glance up
To see the neighbor
Who lives next door.

To Know IN security

To feel the uncertainties
Of inexperienced youth;
To know the anxieties
That accompany a lack
Of class preparation,
Hesitatingly to await
The results of a test
On which the answers
Seemed just out of reach,
To feel the pressures
Of an active schedule.
To be conscious
Of an "inbetween" period,
Too young for adulthood
But old enough to try
And contribute new ideas.
To be aware of the need
For special acceptance
And feel misunderstood
By friends and family.
To be filled with doubts
About individual talents
And to need to feel
The quiet reassurance
Of a steady hand.

To fight IN difference

To take a stand,
To fight for a cause;
To resist the temptation
To make every skirmish
A major conflict.
To voice an opinion;
To make known
What is felt inside.
To listen for the sounds
That echo the deepest
Feelings of a classmate;
To care in a world often
Characterized by apathy.
To replace empty words
With warm friendship;
To try to bridge
The endless void
Between teachers and teens,
Parents and offspring.
To be alive and take part
In each facet
Of being young in 1970.

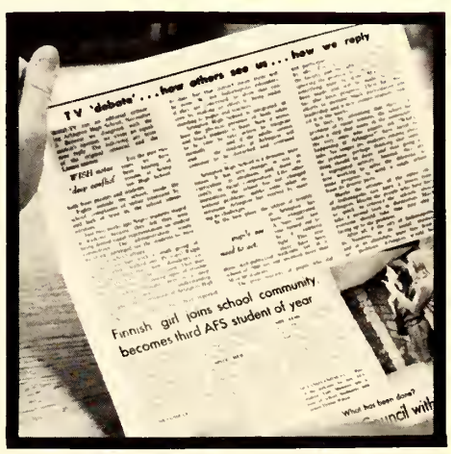

To be IN volved

To search for solutions
To surrounding problems,
Forming Human Relation
Councils to work
Toward brotherhood;
To lend a helping hand
Regardless of color.
To build understanding
Between generations,
Yet often to be blind
To opinions and advice
Of older advisors.
To help a friend
With homework unclear,
And express a concern
For world situations . . .
By sharing convictions,
Reading editorial pages,
And participating
In government policies.

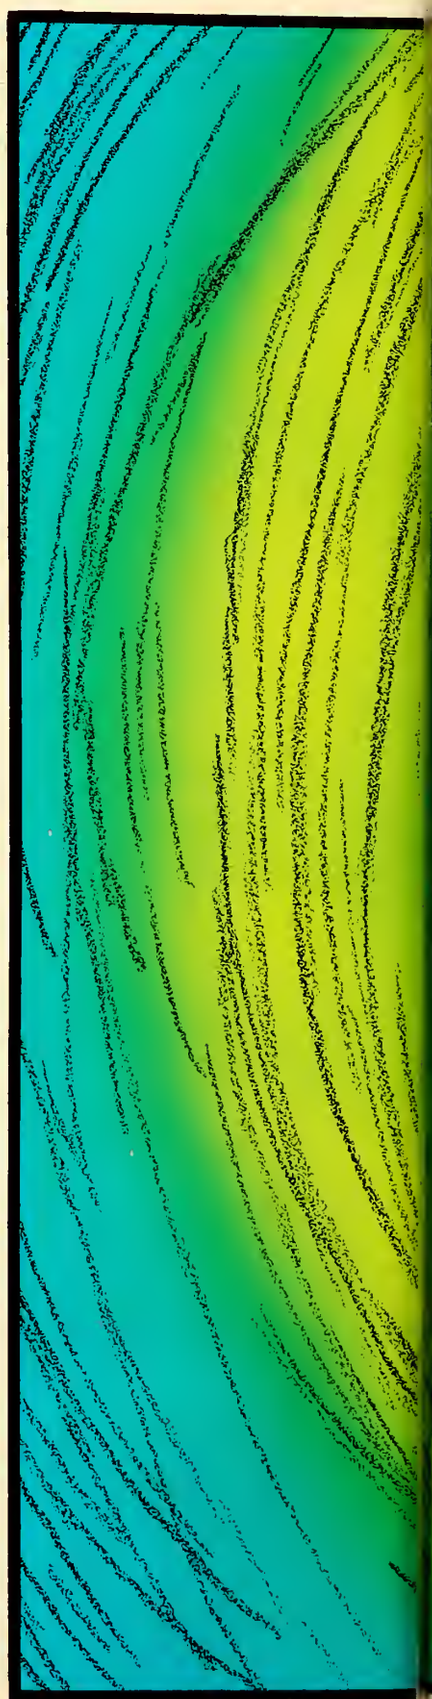

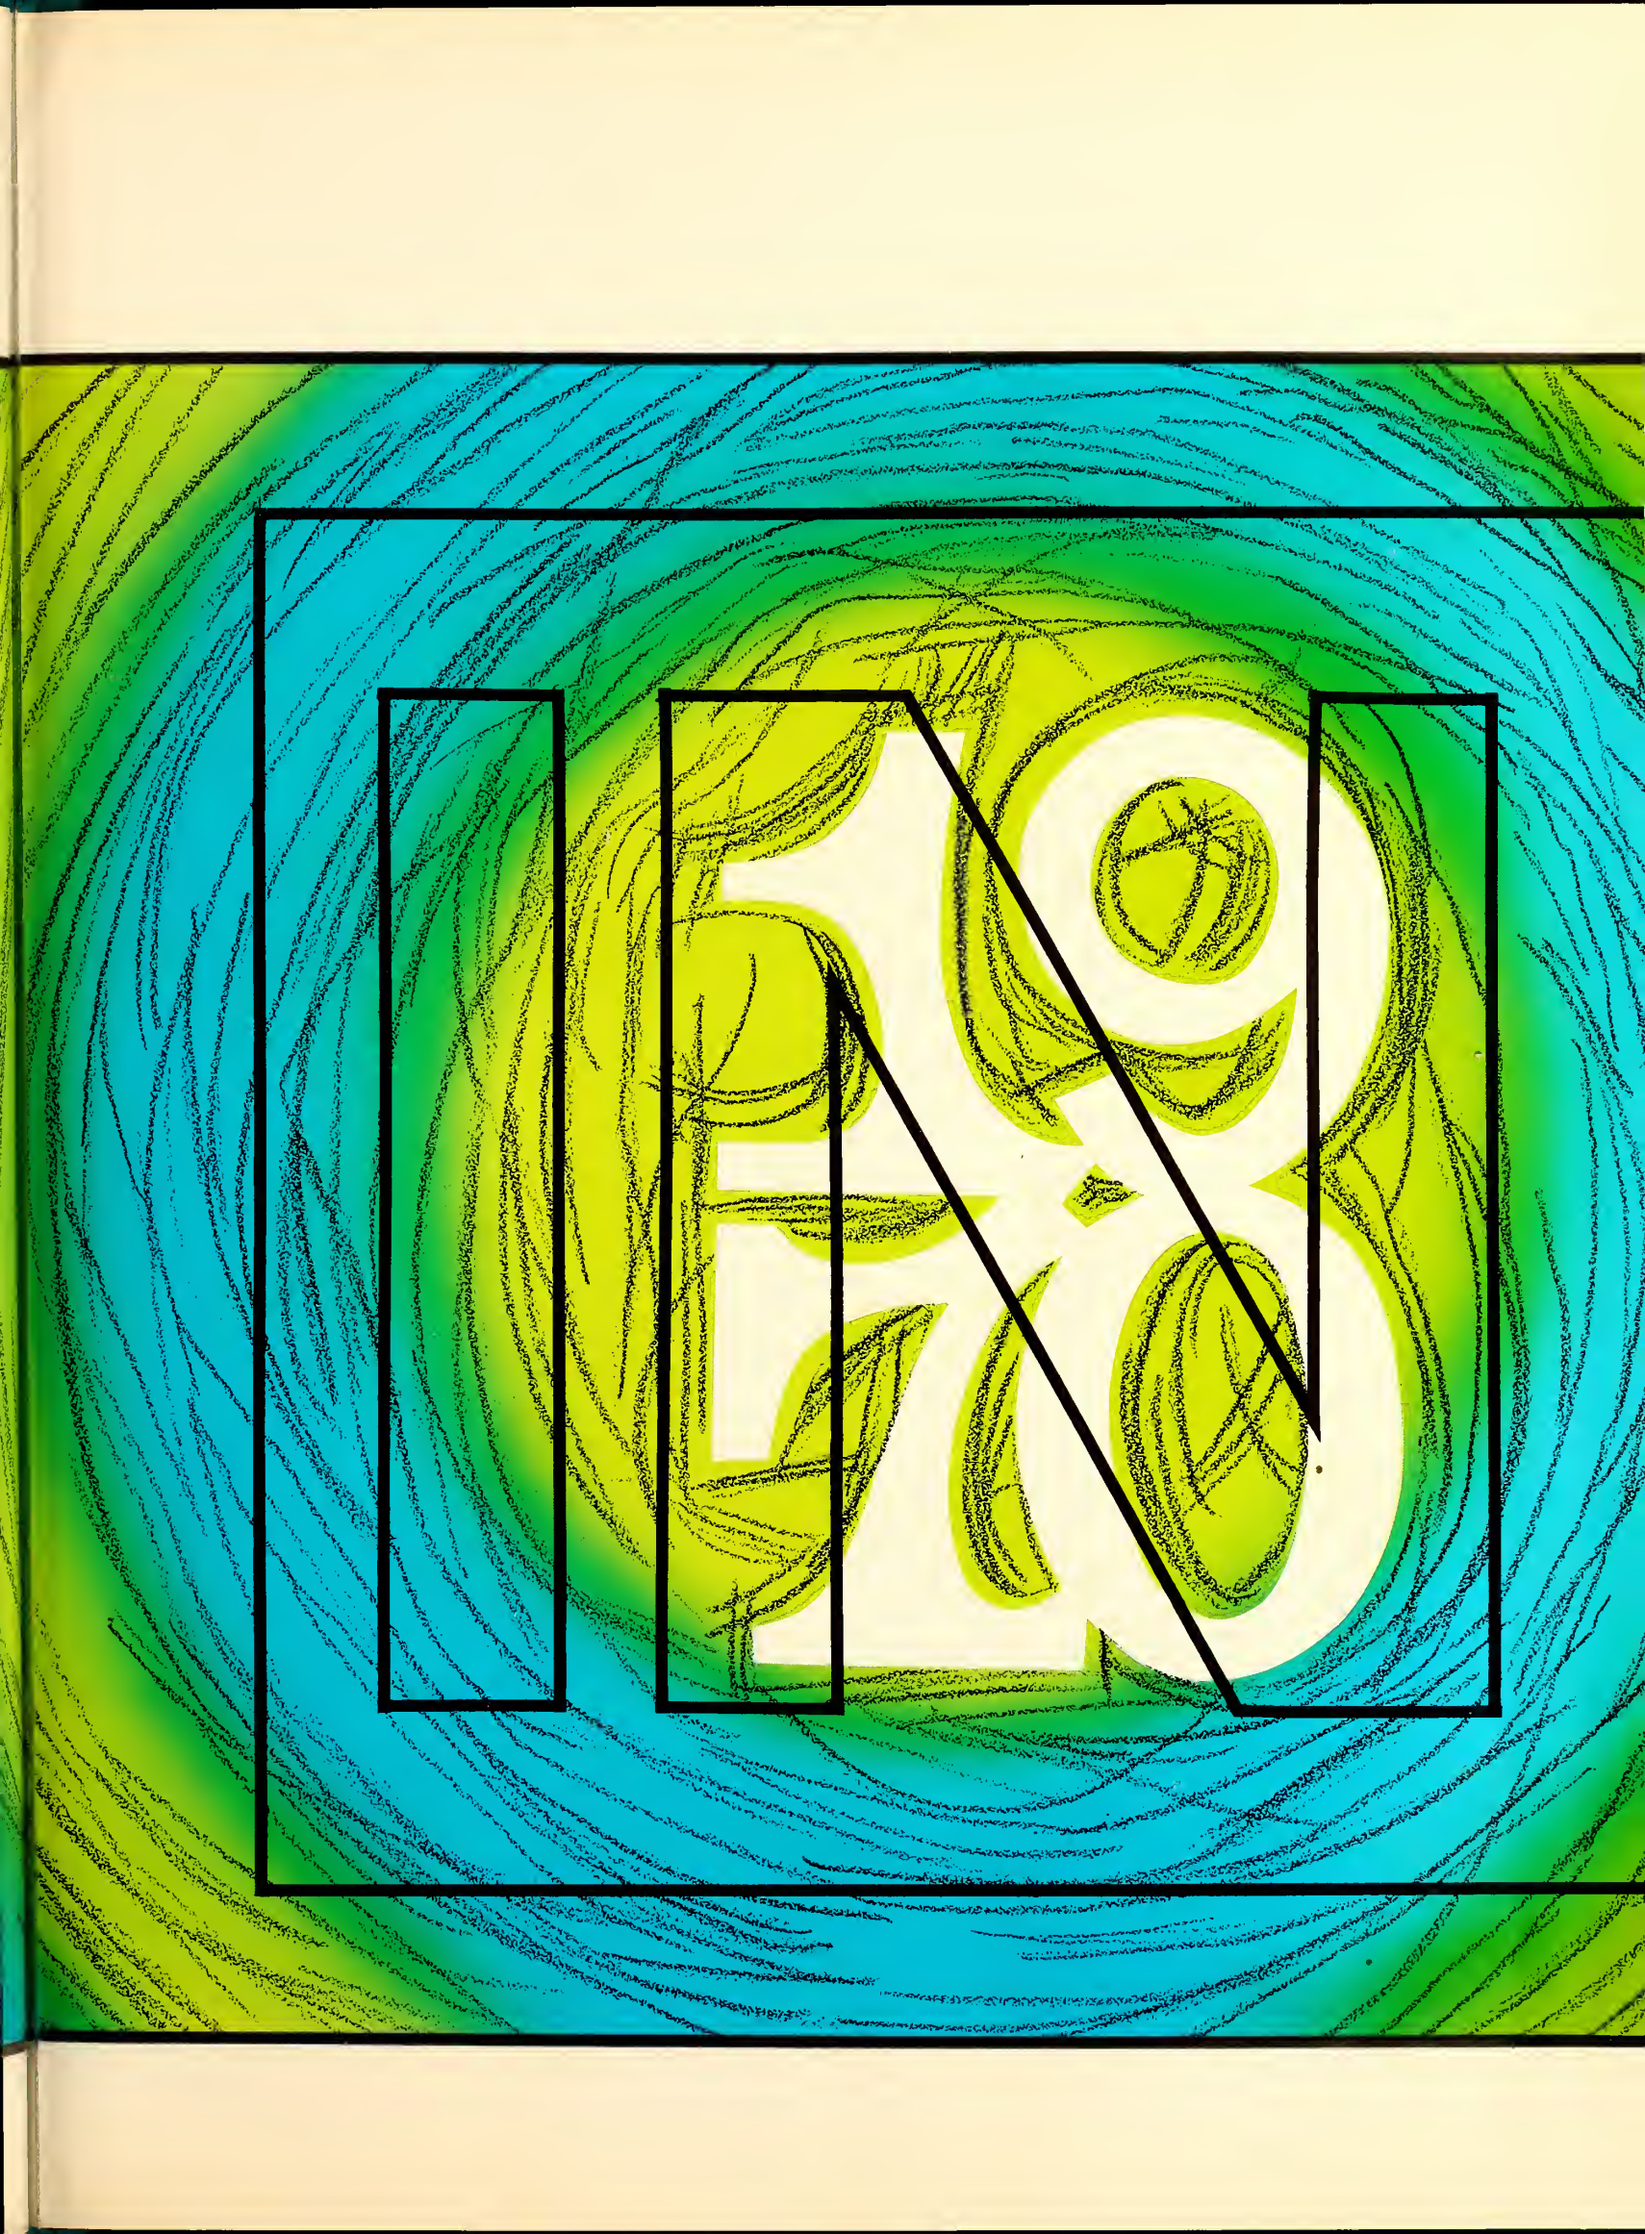

To be IN Tune

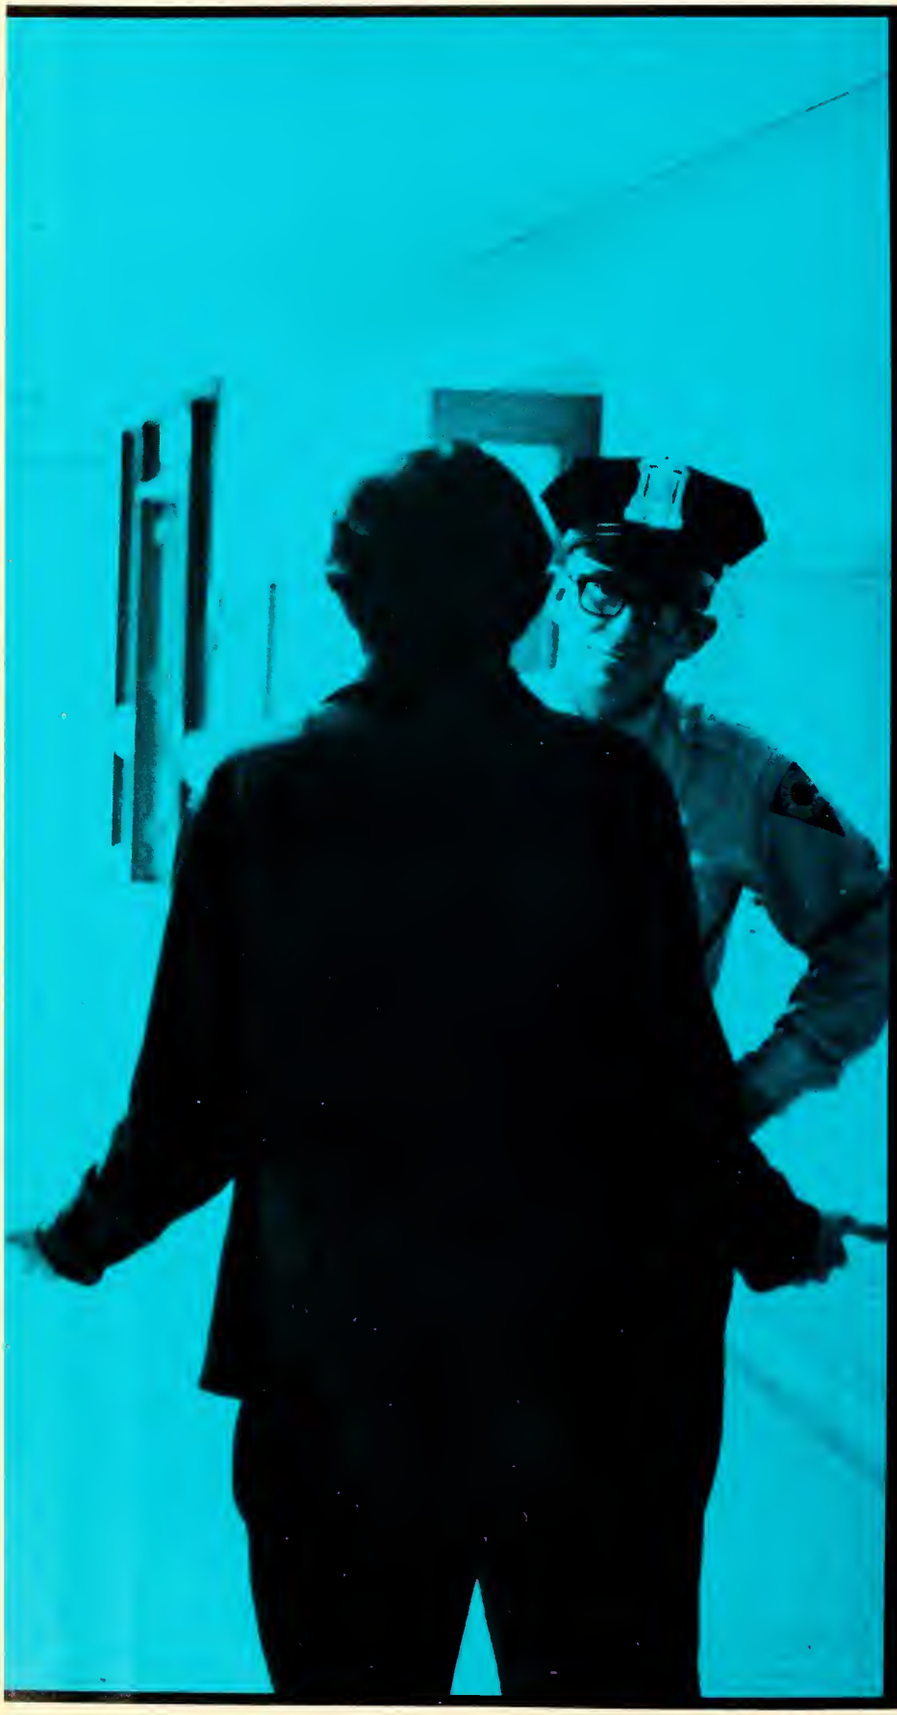

To relive the sounds
Of a passing year;
To recall the clamor
Of slamming lockers
And shuffling footsteps;
To hear the soft strains
Of the Arlington hymn;
To know again the sound
Of 2800 individuals
Uniting under one name.
To plant one foot
Into the searching '70's;
To remember the moments
Of the inbetween year,
Relating in some way
To every event.
To relive the rhythm
Of Arlington in 1970.

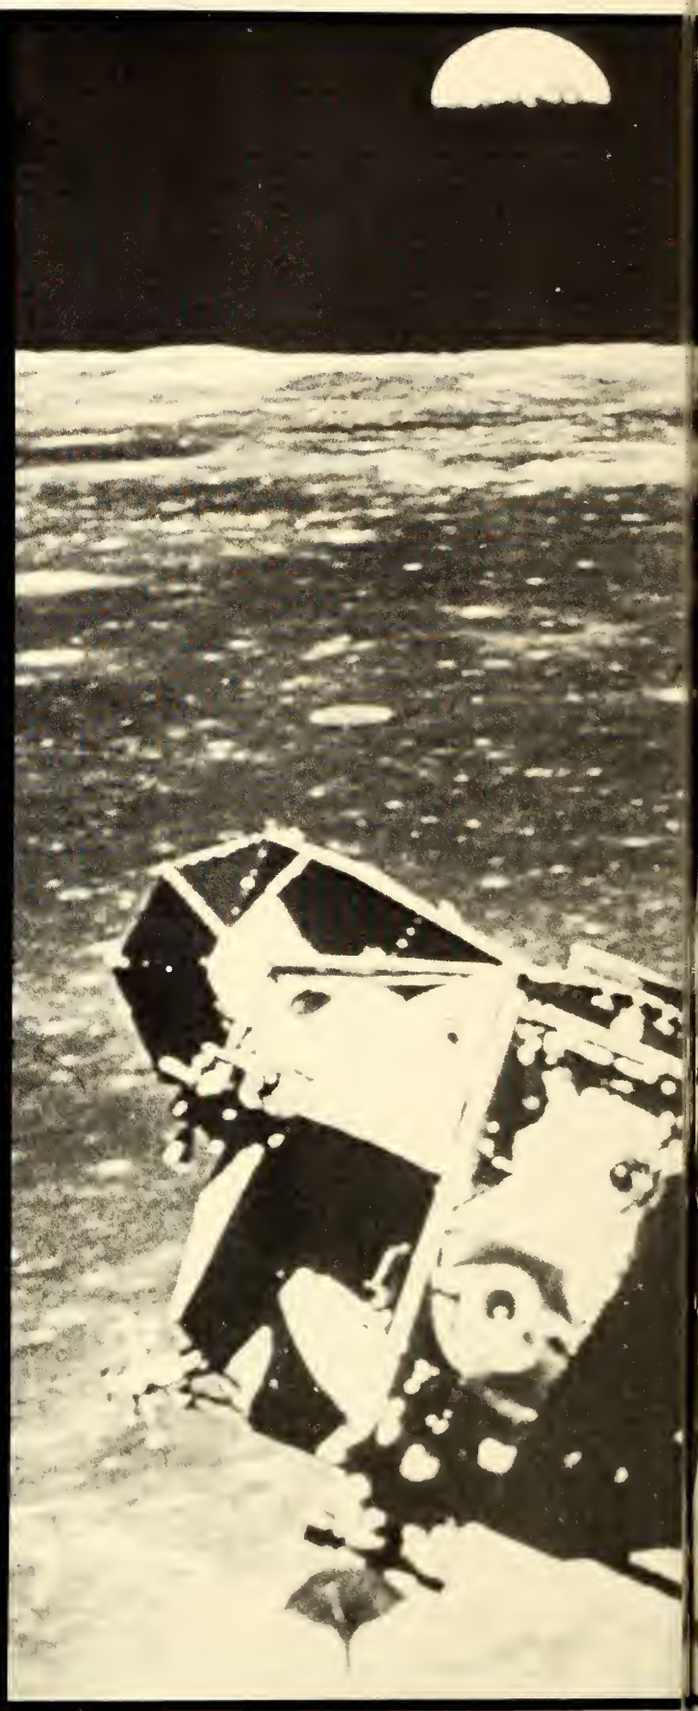

IN between two decades

A year of reforms . . .
A draft code revision,
A man on the moon,
And a de-escalation
Of the war in Viet Nam.
Good-bye . . .
. . . to the sixties
When youth became active
In national elections;
Unrest on campus grew;
and a nation mourned the
Deaths of famed leaders.
Hello . . .
. . . to the seventies
With more moon walks
And maybe more walkouts;
A step closer to unity
And improving education;
A new chance for peace.

Talent Show / yearbook sales campaign ends on stage with double feature

With an emphasis on brotherhood and bridging the generation gap, Knights worked together to transform an ordinary program into a meaningful production in the 1969 Accolade talent show, "IN"ter the Young.

A narration with color slides opened the show while fast paced music and iridescent lighting lent the atmosphere for the performance that followed.

Representing all phases of entertainment, the 21 acts blended their talents to create chorus line spoofs and the sound of Star-lighter soul and religious folk.

The Arlingtones highlighted the evening with a musical salute to Knight and Gale, Jim Seamon and Barbara Saillant.

Ending the production on a thoughtful note, the Campus Life Group echoed the thoughts of many with the message, "Get with It."

Despite the tensions of opening night, cast members find the time for backstage clowning.

Karen Ryza, sophomore, executes a perfect walkover during her tap dance routine, "Bugle Call Rag."

Adding a spark to the talent show, 'IN'ter the Young, members of the barbershop quartet Lloyd White, Dave Edmonds, Steve Kehrer, and Dan Lane recall sentimental memories.

Seniors Barbara Saillant and Jim Seamon reign as "Knight" and "Gale", Arlington's ideal teens.

ACCOLADE staff member Willie Portilla helps freshman Joe Wickers choose a day for his audition.

Homecoming / squad feels Hornet sting, grads 're-enter' for night

Aiding a fellow player, two Knights take time out from a rough game. Although Knights lost the game, fans and players retained a winning spirit.

Old friends, former teachers, and fans, warmed by coats, smiles, and a 5-0 record, greeted alumni returning for homecoming.

A swarming crowd circled the field as fans, awaiting the battle of the unbeaten with Howe, squeezed into packed stands. During halftime, a parade of ten winning floats preceded Nancy Meek, homecoming queen, around the field. A sock hop concluded festivities.

Although the Knights lost, 34-14, chants of "We're proud of our team" echoed in the stadium.

Teachers Ferne Gurvitz and Margaret Blessing "grade" a float in pre-game judging.

Former student council president Marc Boucher greets his successor at the sock hop.

Halftime celebration activities reach a climax with the crowning of the 1969 homecoming queen, senior Nancy Meek. Nancy receives roses and congratulations from Mr. Clevenger.

Members of the marching band "raise their colors proudly" in halftime activities.

Sophomore homeroom 340 receives rewards for weeks of painting, cutting, and constructing, as it captures first place honors in the parade of winners for the second straight year.

Sound of Music / standing ovations honor entire cast

"Climb Every Mountain" . . . Senior Kate Wichser, portraying Mother Abbess, persuades Maria to follow her heart and return to the Von Trapp family.

Backstage horseplay relieves "butterflies" for second grader Alison Menchhofer and Sonny Jones.

Hours of afternoon and evening rehearsals, homework done to the light of an arc spotlight, and days of perfecting songs and dances paid off with two standing ovations for the cast members of "The Sound of Music," Arlington's eighth annual musical production.

The countryside of pre-war Austria came to Indianapolis through the efforts of the Art Club. Wood, fabric, and paper became the mountains, staircases, and furnishings that thrilled audiences. A well-rehearsed orchestra provided the background music to the November 21 and 22 performances, and seniors Marcia Reider and Steve Kehrer added acting know-how as Maria Rainer and Captain Von Trapp to total a delightful evening.

Learning the "habits" of their parts, twenty girls in the nuns' chorus gave impressive dignity to the religious scenes and added harmony to the other "sounds of music."

A sudden thunderstorm sends frightened children Jill Holmes, Alison Menchhofer, Cindy Clark, and Roxanne Cooley to Maria's bed. Maria overcomes their fears by leading them in song.

"One more dance, Gretl" . . . Captain "Steve Kehrer" Von Trapp advises his sleepy daughter.

Guests discuss the impending Nazi invasion.

Maintaining "A" averages throughout high school, seniors Chris Halter, Doug Greeson, Linda Rosenquist, Phil Gelston, and Arlene Mithoefer rank highest in their class.

Julie Tyler, NCTE award winner, and Mrs. Clarena Huffington discuss her published composition.

Exchanging experiences gained at Boy's and Girl's State, seniors Bob Riley, Cindy Loomis, JoAnn Pappas, and Libby Cochran recall ideas from the summer workshop.

Honors and Awards / achievements bring rewards

Combining leadership, citizenship, and scholarship, seniors achieved success with individual honors and awards.

Submitting examples of her best writing, Julie Tyler was selected one of eleven Indiana winners of the National Council of Teachers of English Achievement Awards.

Gaining experience in government and politics, four seniors represented the school at Boy's and Girl's State. During a workshop situation last summer, they participated in mock elections for state officials.

Senior Ken Gray was chosen winner of the Bausch and Lomb Award for his excellence in science, while Chris Halter received the DAR Good Citizenship Award.

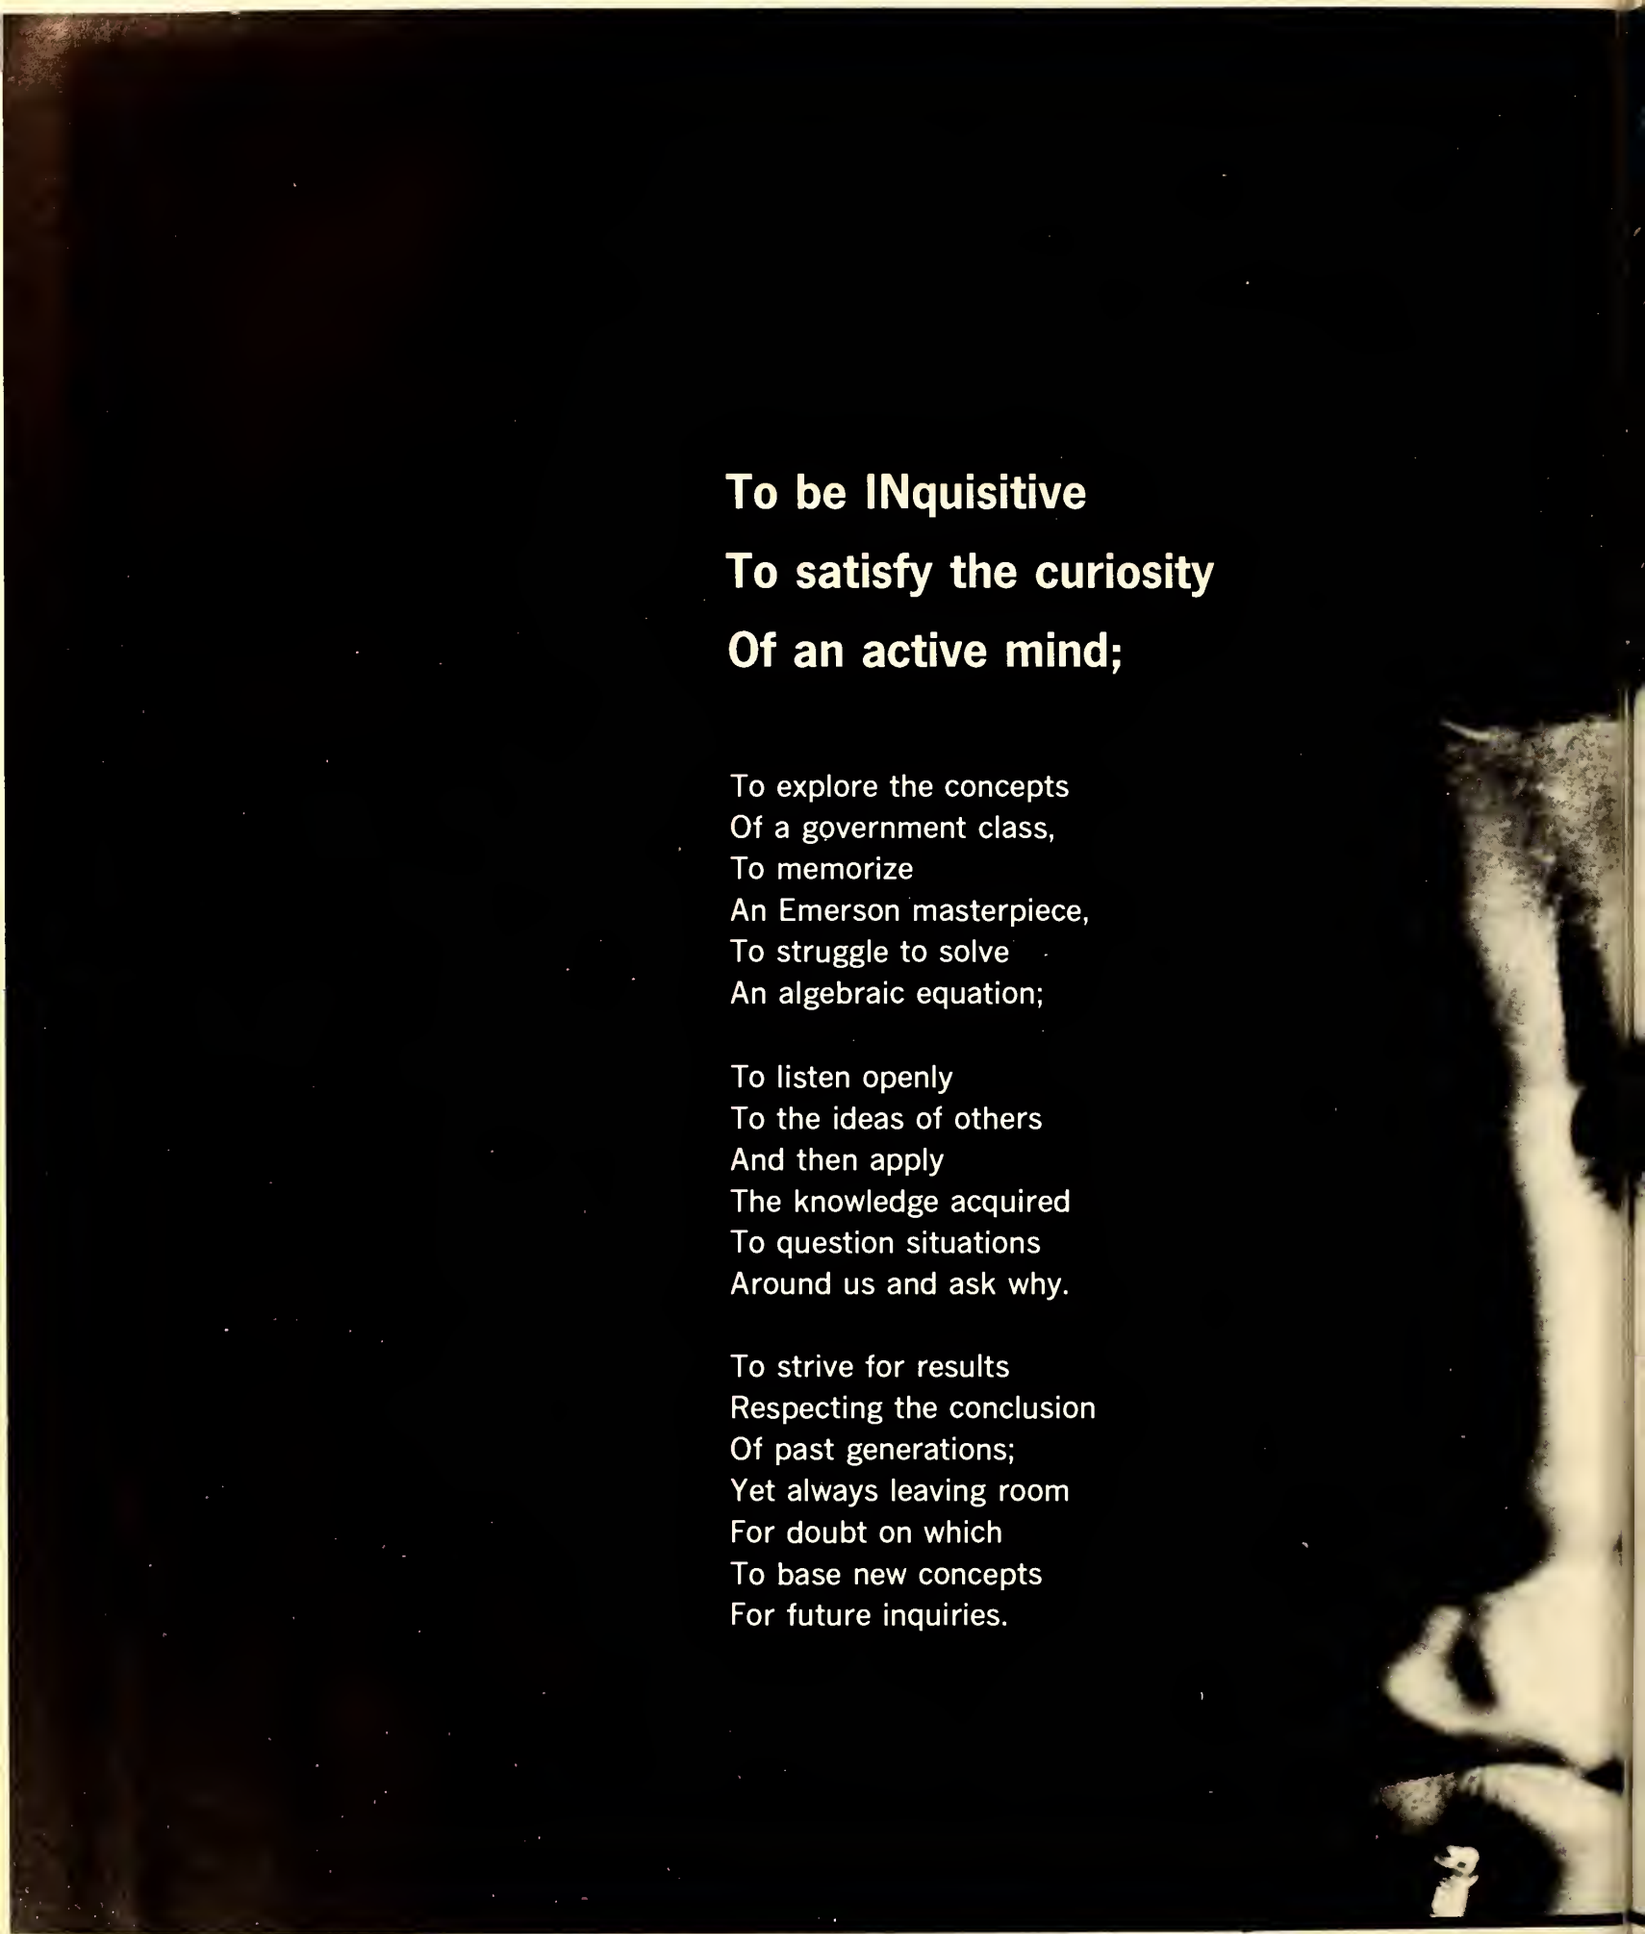

Scholastically strong, the senior class boasted five students that qualified for the positions of valedictorian and salutatorian.

Working in a chemistry lab, Ken Gray, Bausch-Lomb Award winner, perfects his scientific techniques.

Playing the harp in orchestra is one of DAR good citizen Chris Halter's many activities.

To be INquisitive
To satisfy the curiosity
Of an active mind;

To explore the concepts
Of a government class,
To memorize
An Emerson masterpiece,
To struggle to solve
An algebraic equation;

To listen openly
To the ideas of others
And then apply
The knowledge acquired
To question situations
Around us and ask why.

To strive for results
Respecting the conclusion
Of past generations;
Yet always leaving room
For doubt on which
To base new concepts
For future inquiries.

Academics

English / budding authors, grammarians expand abilities with practice

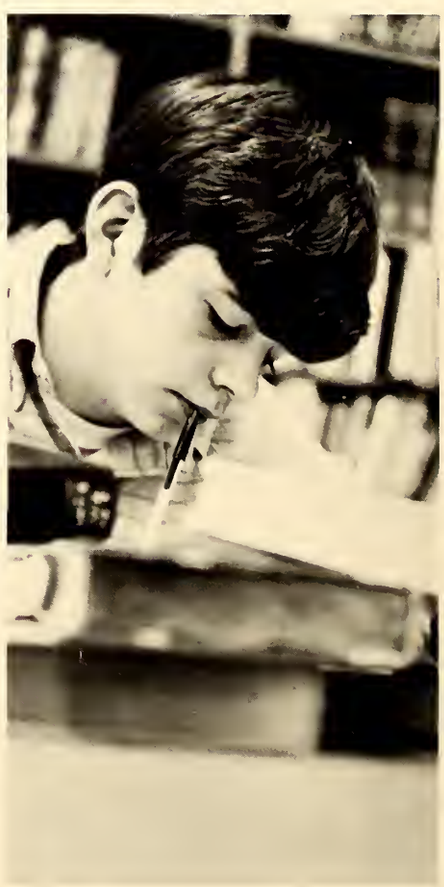

Term papers, vocabulary words, and grammar exercises typified English classes as Knights studied both simple and complex forms of grammar and composition.

Guest speaker Michael Warlum, at the invitation of department head Clarena Huffington, created an extra opportunity for students to broaden their interests. Mr. Warlum delivered a selection of his poems and discussed their inspiration at an after-school lecture. Mr. R. L. Sidner from RCA and Mr. Lloyd Anderson from the Indianapolis Star-News also presented practical tips to classes.

Elected by juniors and seniors, a course in Derivatives helped these students to widen their vocabulary scope through special projects related to the subject .

Keith Neilson remembers word meaning through phonetic spelling and dictionary definitions.

Gathering information for an English term assignment, Robert Wilkes uses library facilities.

Outside reading of classics aids Bob Watkins and Gary Ford in an appreciation of literature.

Mr. John Schulz goes over a list of Greek and Latin based words with senior Roger West.

Poet Michael Warlum explains his medium of expression to Jerry Glass, Jan Perkins, and Suzi Taylor.

Accounting for picture sales, ACCOLADE staff editors count and check the receipts.

Striving for perfection, sophomore Brian Callahan uses the fundamentals of public speaking as he prepares and delivers his speech.

English/ speech, drama, publications students learn fundamentals of communications

Publications I students voice their opinions on libel as they learn the principles of journalism.

Words evolved into speeches, stories and memorized passages from a play. Students gained the experience needed before entering a speech contest, working on newspaper and yearbook staffs, and presenting a stage production. The basic fundamentals stressed in drama, publications and speech classes helped students reach into the communication world.

Giving a well-planned demonstration added variety to speech classes as students gained ease in speaking freely and learned the correct way of delivering a speech.

As if trying to write a theme for an English class, students found some difficulties writing factual, but interesting features, editorials and news stories. Along with writing assignments, a few students involved themselves learning the skills of taking pictures and developing the film.

Preparation for involvement with stagework, study of different costume periods, use of stage make-up and presentations of excerpts from plays brought variation in dramatic classes.

Dramatic pupils Jim Boyd and Valerie Calvert perform scene from a colonial life play in a presentation to their classmates.

Foreign Language / lingual history, studies lead students to understanding

In an oral Spanish quiz, Mrs. Mercedes Portilla evokes a quick response from her students.

Beginning with basic dialogue followed by grammar and literature, students studying a foreign language gained not only academic training, but also an insight into other people of the world. By becoming acquainted with the native tongue of another country, the students also learned its culture, geography, history, and way of life. In preparation for college or a future vocation, Knights studied Spanish, French, German, and Latin.

Outstanding foreign language students were rewarded with the opportunity to study abroad during the summer. Michael Reap participated in the Honors Program for Latin students, and traveled in Italy. For their achievements in French, Saralyn Stalcup and Philip Gelston studied in Saint Brieuc, France with the I.U. Honors Program.

Mr. John Schultz draws from his experience in Germany to explain a point in German grammar.

Ken Missick, Bob McCarty, and Edna Johnson display their Latin projects to Mr. Swinford.

Relating their experiences abroad, Doug Greeson and Saralyn Stalcup "teach" their French class.

Science / students read, examine, experiment, discover basic scientific knowledge

Dissecting, experimenting in the refraction of light, and studying microorganisms led the inquisitive minds of science students into the depths of the scientific field. From biology to physics, students delved into the many aspects of science.

For the first time, daily use of the science museum was offered, giving students a chance to investigate antique equipment, structural models, and nature displays. A.H.S. students were privileged this year with the use of both the museum and the planetarium.

A new zest was added to the science department with the addition of photrometers and spectrometers given to Arlington by Bio-dynamics.

Headed by Mr. Merle Wimmer, three teachers were added to the science staff, including Mr. Eiler, the first Arlington grad to return to teach. Other new teachers were Miss Brand and Miss Oliver.

Examing a helix of DNA molocules, Tom Henderson feels lost among endless atoms.

Junior Jeff McDermott looks on as Mr. Wimmer, department head, exhibits his techniques.

Students marvel at man's progress in the space age as they watch Apollo 11 begin a mission.

Working with cathode rays, Vicki VanDuren "discovers" properties of electrons.

Don Fillion and Kenny Finn seek to perfect their science aptitude by constructing equipment.

Assisting Diane Bailey, Craig May offers the solution to an algebraic equation.

Taking the interpreter's role, sophomore John Tranberg reads explainations and instructions for constructing a triangular figure, while Chuck Elliott performs the manual part of the job.

Helping a puzzled student, Mr. Henry Volk copes with individual problems.

Math / numbers become useful tools for solving sums, equations

The paths of future astronauts and accountants crossed as Knights gained a useful background in the science of mathematics.

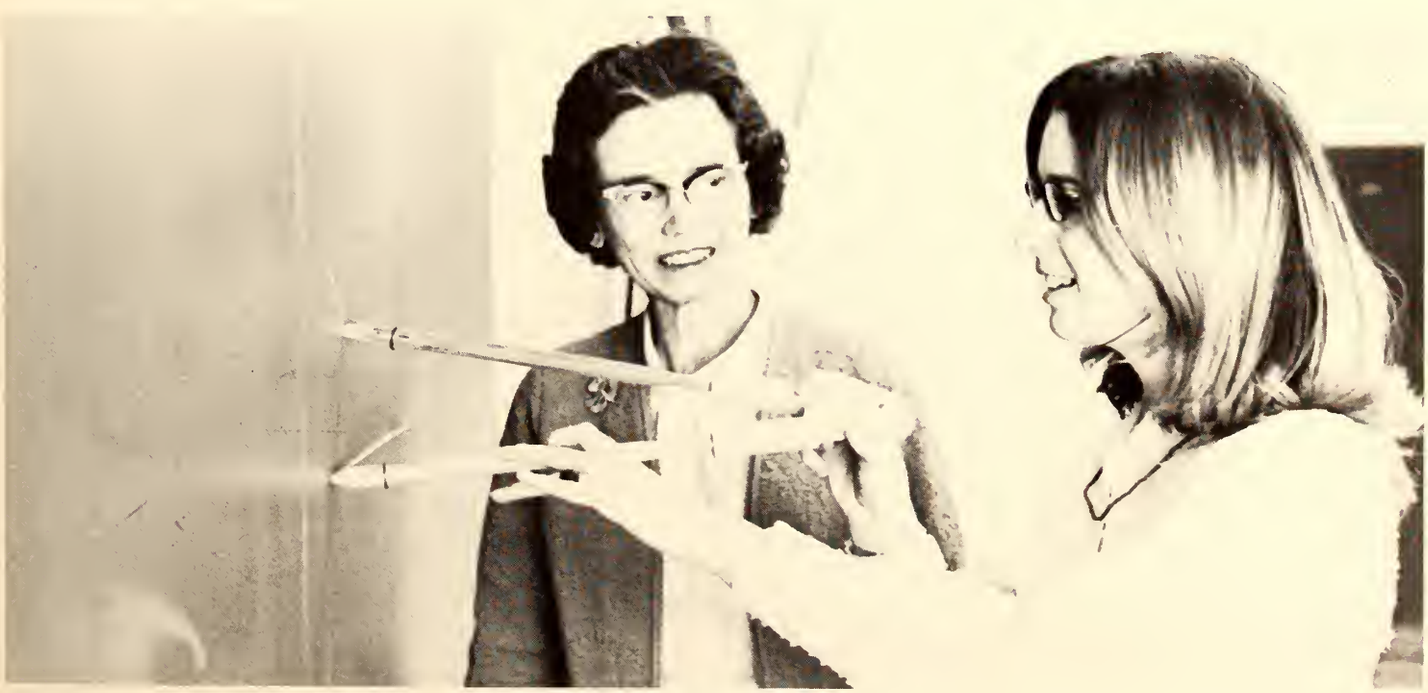

Students were offered an extensive curriculum that varied from business math and basic algebra to the advanced courses of trigonometry and calculus. An experimental course, the first of its kind in the state, was taught during the spring semester as an intermediate between College Algebra and calculus.

Under the direction of new department head Donald Clodfelter, an enrollment of 2000 explored the unknowns of percentages and linear equations. With a staff that included two new teachers and 11 returning ones, the department sponsored the Math Club and made preparations for the adaptation of new texts. The math team proved itself by winning the Rose Poly math contest for the second year in a row.

Freshman Joe Greeson sees the world through a mathematician's eyes as he pursues errorless calculations while working on logarithms.

Watching with approval, Miss Martha Burton supervises junior Paula Sauer's construction of a geometric figure on a "stand-by" basis.

Social Studies / looking at yesterday to plan for future

Living between the past and the future, Knights enrolled in social studies classes gathered the knowledge needed for tomorrow.

Mock elections in government and economics classes changed the tempo of the normal class routine, as it prepared seniors for future elections and possible careers in the political world.

Cadet teaching and current event discussions also allowed students to gain practical experience and to ready for future duties as American citizens.

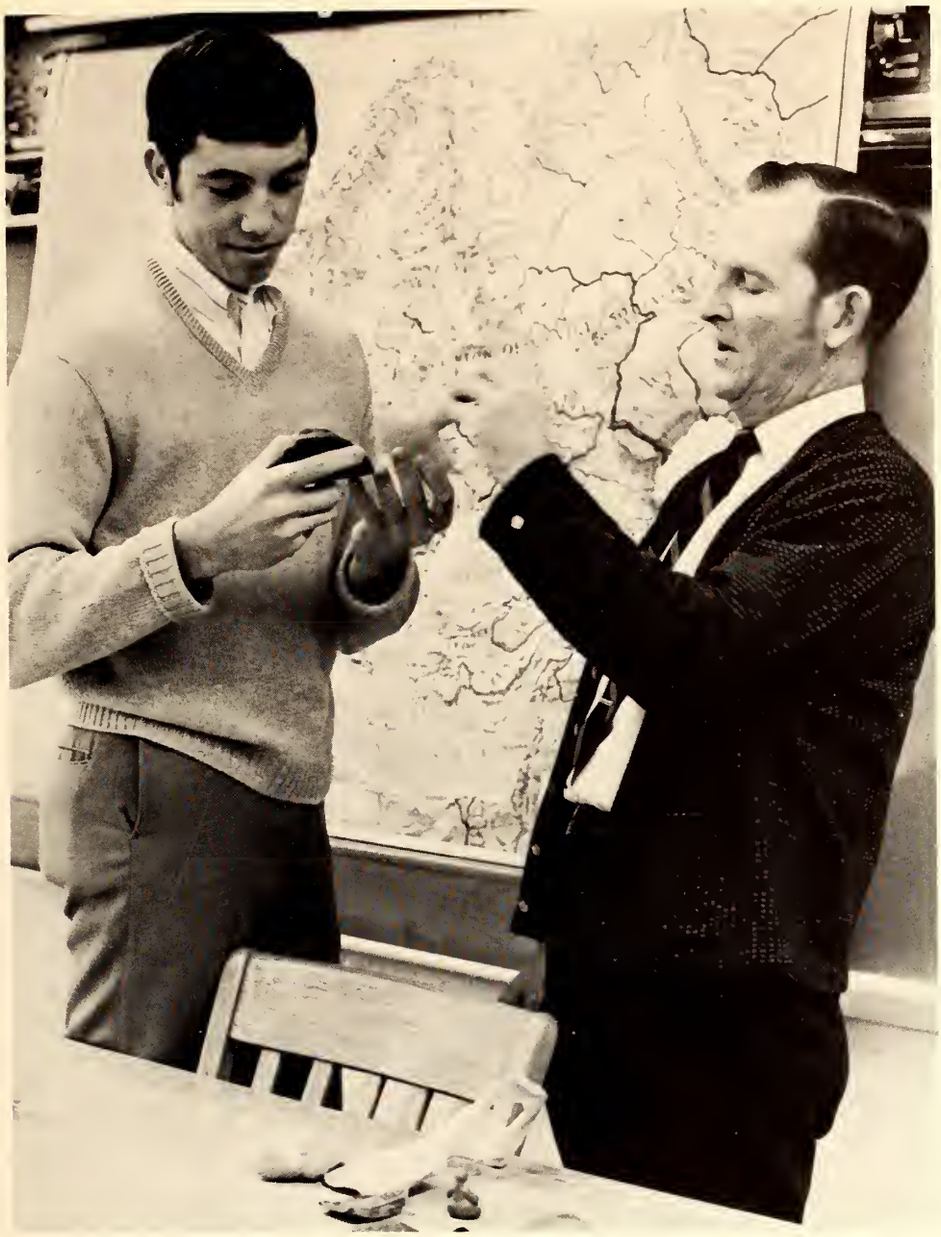

Freshman historians analyzed the world's past as sophomores studied its geography. Juniors, having mastered the study of world history, narrowed their field of study to the United States and its development and peoples.

Boasting an enrollment of 2092 students, new textbooks, and 15 teachers, the Social Studies Department also offered courses in psychology, anthropology, and sociology to further allow the inquisitive Knight to build his future from a study of the past.

Freshmen Stephanie Barbour and Mike Cochran retrace the quests of world explorers.

Betsy Reyburn completes the final step in the voting process as she casts her ballot.

Mr. Mannan and Phil Vogelsang differentiate the artifacts discussed in anthropology.

Junior Valerie Patterson discusses a test grade with department head John Morris.

Mr. Donald Shambaugh stresses the significance of historical knowledge.

ROTC / cadets prepare for service in armed forces, master basic drill, rifle, combat principles

Earning high recognition for his performance in ROTC, Rick King receives an honor award.

One hundred and seventy boys from the rank of private to lieutenant colonel studied and drilled daily in military fashion in the Reserve Officer's Training Corps. Learning fighting tactics and practicing precision drilling, the boys developed accuracy both on the firing range and in the classroom.

Putting their talents on display, ROTC units participated in the annual Veteran's Day Parade in November. ROTC offered competitive spirit to a select group of cadets. Sporting distinctive uniforms, the boys of the Varsity Drill and Rifle Teams represented Arlington in competition with other city ROTC units.

The Military Ball, held in the school cafeteria in March, was the social event of the year that each cadet looked forward to attending.

These and other aspects of the ROTC program involved the cadets while it instilled a sense of pride and patriotism rarely found in this age of evergrowing apathy.

Sponsor Terri Smith straightens the uniform of a cadet before inspection.

Displaying the national symbol, the ROTC color guard participates in the Veteran's Day Parade.

Carol Huser and Lance Wickliff stroll in University Park after the Veterans' Parade.

Preparing cadets for various emergencies, Sgt. Blackburn emphasizes first aid.

Physical Education / keeping fit for living

Bewildered driver education students must apply textbook rules to the car as they find themselves approaching 65 mph. on Road 100 on their second day of driving.

Feet together . . . Mrs. Burdeen Schmidt helps foreign exchange student Veronica Sanchez perfect her form and balance in a headstand. Interested in gymnastics, Veronica is in advanced phys. ed.

Students in the Physical Education Department studied with a double purpose in mind.

Attaining physical fitness through exercise routines and active basketball, volleyball, and baseball games, they also profitted by gaining valuable activities for future leisure time.

Health classes studied hygiene, body functions, good grooming, and first aid while increasing their knowledge of the effects of drugs and alcohol.

Driver education students prepared for the future by acquiring the skills of motoring.

Piloting new cars, the "student drivers" tried to disprove their reputation as the greatest menace on the highway. Their training included not only actual experience in the car, but valuable information for tomorrow's driving situations.

"Co-ed" volleyball enlivens freshmen students as they take a break in the usual routine.

In advanced physical education, sophomore Rudolf Sherman and junior Randy Lowe build their muscles, body co-ordination, and flexability in climbing ropes.

In health class, Damon Wilson uses a "late" smoker to demonstrate the dangers of smoking.

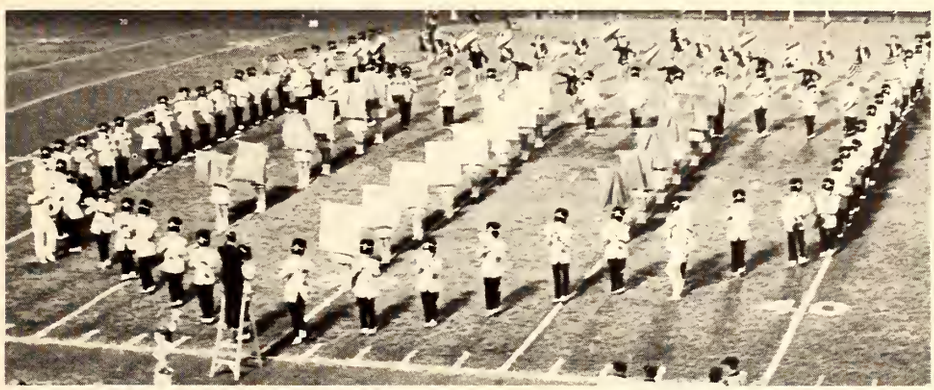

Enclosed in a sound-proof practice room, music student Don Calvin perfects a solo.

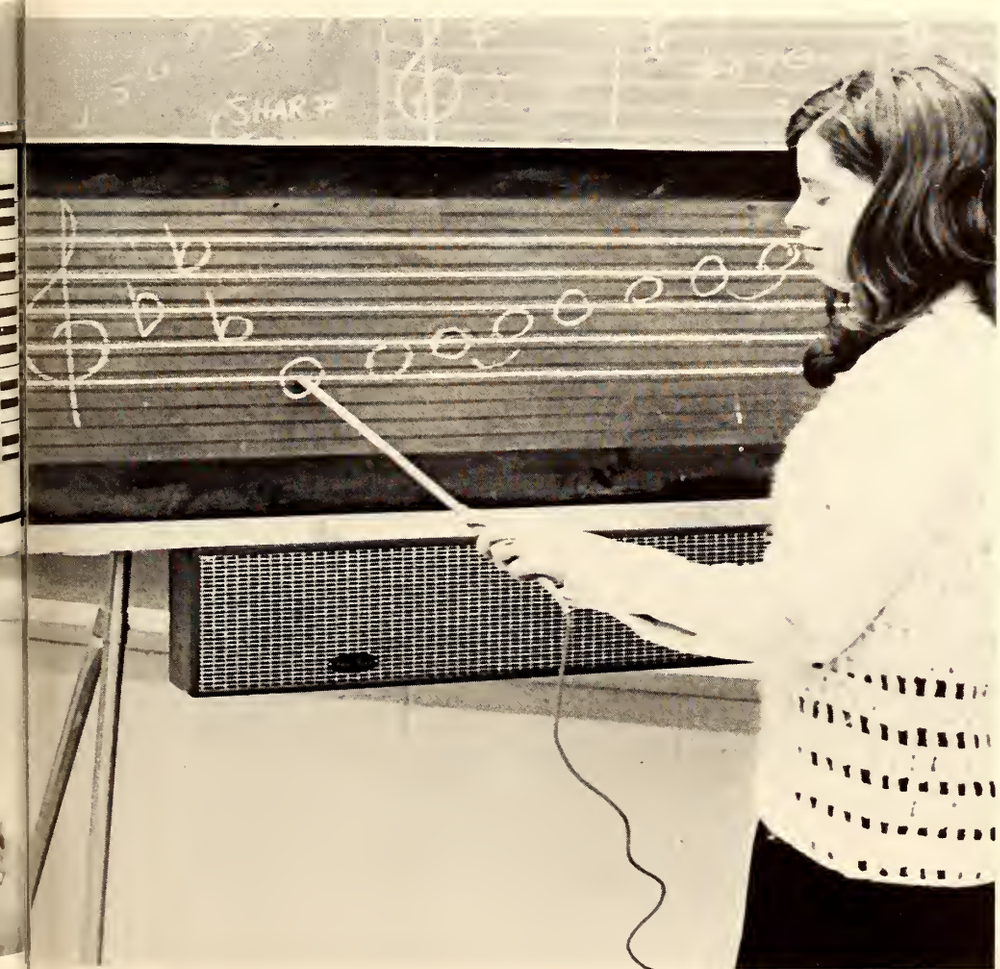

Music Appreciation students study classical masterpieces with Miss Pricilla Smith.

Music / instrumentalists, singers perfect pitch; prepare, present musical entertainment

The pre-game performance in red, white, and blue is the climax of weeks of playing and drilling.

Talent was unlimited as the Music Department provided entertainment in performances ranging from stage productions to half-time shows.

New additions to the department increased its educational span and attracted new students to enroll in classes. A harp obtained by the school provided an opportunity for students to study privately while daily practice was exercised in band and orchestra.

The department's new band director, Mr. William Salzmann, led the musicians in band concerts, football half-times, and pep band rallies while Miss Priscilla Smith directed orchestra activities. Outstanding students included violinist Sharon Taylor who earned the position of concert mistress for the Concert Orchestra and the All-City High School Symphony.

A machine that sounds notes as Barb Stephenson points to them offers Mrs. Zonda Montgomery a unique teaching device.

Directing a practice session, Mr. Horine gives instructions to members of the orchestra.

Typing students learn concentration and dexterity through daily exercise, as well as gaining a valuable skill.

Nancy Greene demonstrates that perfection is essential in both academic and career worlds.

Janet Perkins utilizes her own file box to gain experience for future filing jobs.

Business / Knights prepare for business world, acquire basics for future careers

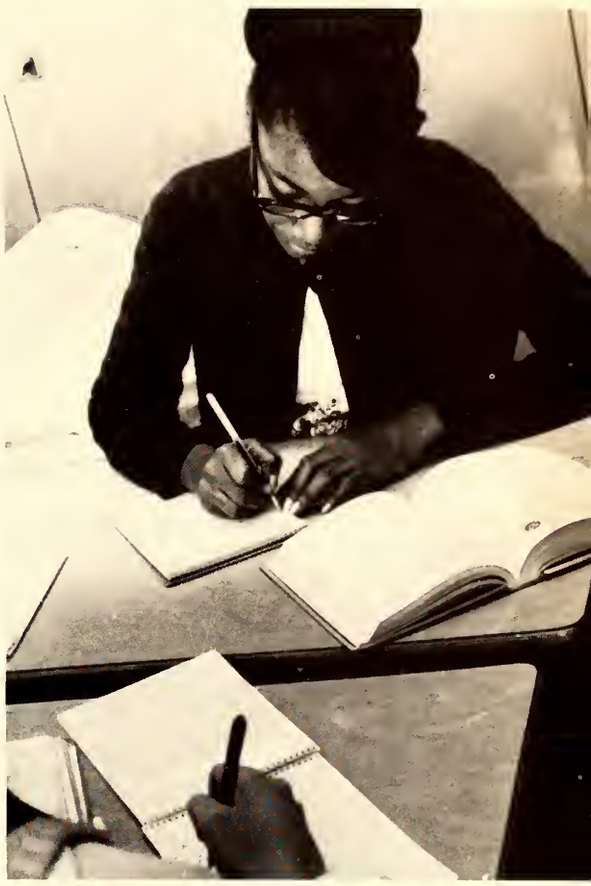

Data processing student Randy Bland sight-reads his computer card as he uses the manual key punch for programming.

Perfection of skills, adapted to business or personal use, was the goal of business education students this year. Over 1700 Knights gained valuable career experience in classroom "workshops" for shorthand, sales, typing, general business, and bookkeeping.

Learning to be efficient and dependable, future businessmen sought to master the fundamentals of running a business.

Seniors gained on-the-job training while participating in the Co-operative Office Education program. Doubly rewarded, students gained academic credit and monetary payment, plus knowledge of basic business concepts and a guaranteed full time job upon graduation; a common benefit of this employment experience.

The preparation and background achieved from actual business experience assisted today's Knights to become the leaders in tomorrow's business world.

Days of practice with the Gregg method of shorthand is junior Linda Jackson's springboard to a business career.

Mr. Waggoner shares a moment of humor with general business student Susan Ramsey.

Home Economics / girls develop skills for homemaking

Minds clicked, pans clanked, and sewing machines whirred as students in the Home Economics Department prepared practical skills.

Experience for future planning found teens enrolled in Family Living and Housing Management, courses designed around practical situations. Child Care and Home Nursing classes provided girls with valuable information for home emergencies as well as everyday events.

Foods classes found their emphasis in methods of preparation and consumer education and were soon able to put their knowledge to work by serving for school teas.

Clothing classes kept up-to-date with current fabrics and the proper handling and care for each. Projects ranged from formals to coats and suits in advanced courses. At the end of the year, students displayed smart new outfits as they presented the annual May style show.

Home ecomonics students learn culinary techniques ranging from food preparation to baking.

Advanced clothing student Leslie Irons carefully finishes the final inches of precise stitching.

Pressing her tailored "creation," Barbara Martin practices good clothing care.

Dicing vegetables for a meal, home economics students gain experience for future homemaking.

Industrial Arts / applying techniques of master craftsman

Wood shop student Robert Taylor uses the all-purpose router to finish his six week's project.

Knights utilized the Industrial Arts Department as they developed skills for home projects and gained knowledge necessary for their future occupations.

Stressing knowledge and understanding along with manual skills, the courses offered students principles and theories of their field along with a chance for practical experience. Projects ranged from the construction of bookcases and tables in wood classes and repairing televisions in electrical courses to the designing of recreation areas, cottages, and houses in mechanical drawing.

Under the direction of a new department head, Bernard Heeke, the Industrial Arts Department also gained two new teachers and claimed the unusual assignment of printing the new freshman paper.

Lending a helping hand, Chuck Lacey aids Jack Hobson in constructing a Metals project

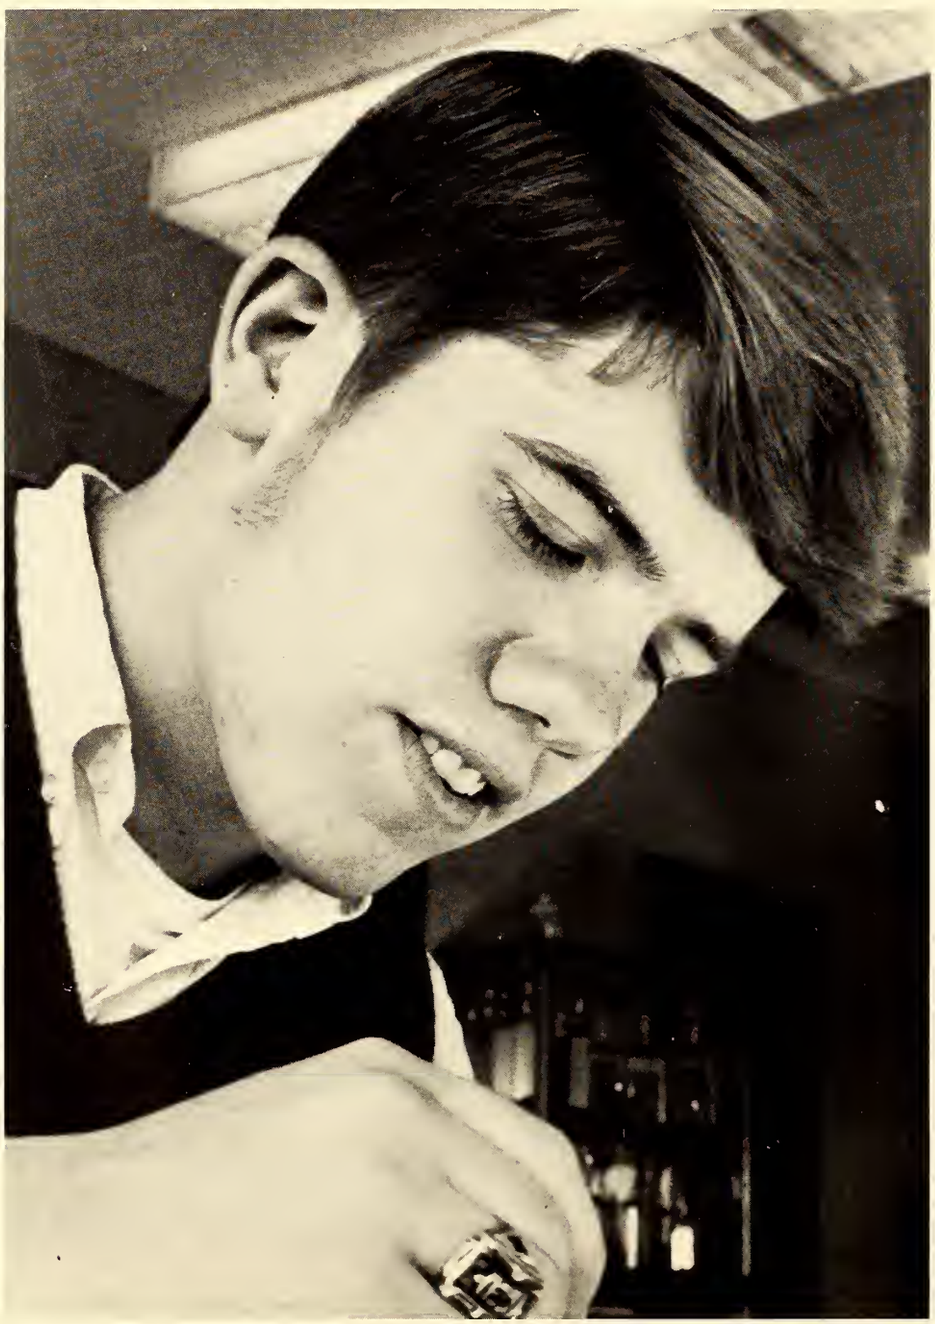

Kevin Higgins accepts the responsibility of keeping shop machinery in good condition.

Sanding off the rough edges of his book shelves, sophomore Steve Hillan requires craftsmanship.

Art / craftsmen color their world with creativity, make original paintings, sculpture, jewelry

Completion of a pencil sketch involves the skill and concentration of artist Bill Verrill.

Spurred by creative interests, students found exciting challenges in the world of art in courses ranging from jewelry to lettering.

Jewelry classes offered new challenges as techniques for cutting and polishing gemstones were introduced. Lapidary equipment was also secured this year.

New techniques in drawing and sculpturing, precision strokes, and workable designs were rewarded by the pride of craftsmanship; while the need for perfection was sparked by an inter-school art contest and various other contest interests outside of the school.

As an extra project this year, eight Art VII students depicted traditional Christmas customs in a mural displayed at the Indianapolis Zoo. The scene was one of six done by city high schools.

Smoothing down sharp edges on a piece of metal, Morris Taylor creates a piece of jewelry.

Carefully lighting a torch, art student Andrea Murray prepares to make a brass bowl and stand.

Painting designs on windows, Bill Shure adds an artistic touch to his "Merry Christmas."

With careful skill and precision, Libby Lane and Gloria Copp spend time perfecting lettering.

To be INvolved, To accept a challenge By fulfilling a goal

To become a leader
Or be an active member
Supporting an issue;
To know the meaning
Of responsibility,
The fervor of success.

Willingly to spend
That extra 40 minutes
At an after-school club,
To march with the band
Generating school spirit,
To share the obligations
Of the Student Council's National Convention.

To contribute ideas
And hours of work
For a worthwhile cause;
To give to others,
Taking the time to care.

Activities

Council / members increase range of activities, prepare for 1970 national convention

With the help of the student body, Student Council members added a new meaning to Council activities as they broadened their outlook on school problems and accepted the responsibilities of a National Student Council Convention.

Improvement of student-teacher relations, promotion of all-school spirit, and encouragement of student involvement were the goals of the Council as they introduced new projects throughout the year. Under the leadership of president Mike Pence, members sponsored a "little 500," the "Valigram," a student messenger service for Valentines Day, Clean-up Week, and The Link, a newsletter for the student body. Representatives also inaugurated an annual Alumni Recognition Day which awarded the first honor to grad Kit Field. Other activities included a clothes drive for the needy during the annual Howdy Week campaign.

An added event to the school's calendar was the National Student Council Convention hosted by Arlington Council members in June. The convention climaxed two years of preparation including the task of providing food, transportation, and housing for over 800 teens. Committees comprised of Council members, faculty advisors, and students helped lay the plans for the meeting. The convention allowed Council members to exchange ideas and discuss the problems within schools around the country. Entertainment for group included an excursion to the Speedway and a dinner at the Murat Egyptian Room.

Student Council / energetic spirit committee, active cabinet chalk up 'smashing' successes with projects

The 28 cabinet members and the 75 boosters in the Spirit Committee overcame apathy and worked to involve the student body.

For the first time cabinet members dared to face critics and to convince those who questioned the purpose of the Council. The "Gripe Hour," an open meeting for the students, evolved from these complaints.

Cabinet members evoked participation as they planned activities ranging from American Education Week to the "turnabout" and the crowning of Cy and Cindy.

Members performed duties like those of the President's Cabinet as they headed committees and helped with the activities.

Promoting school spirit through good sportsmanship, Spirit Committee members also helped fill the shoes of leaders. Supported by the Council, members met regularly to discuss problems, to offer solutions, and to plan spirit activities and displays.

Quill and Scroll "chief" Jill Holmes finishes one of her jobs, making banquet decorations.

Honoraries / top scholars, journalists earn membership for achievement

Meeting certain requirements, students found many rewarding experiences in the honorary groups of National Honor Society and Quill and Scroll.

Twiddling thumbs and nervously awaiting that special name to be called for the first time, future members felt the anxiety and joy of being tapped into the National Honor Society. Throughout a student's junior and senior year, each eligible Knight received a chance for induction by ratings submitted from teachers.

Scholastic students making up the Honor Society sponsored an all-school, semi-formal dance in the spring. Under the guidance of Mrs. Sally Maze and Mr. John Shultz, the Honor Society joined forces with the Student Council to plan a dinner followed by the fall induction of new senior members. Along with the other officers, president Russ Palma illustrated the important factors that helped teachers select the qualified students. Requirements included service, scholarship, leadership, and character.

Promoting a broader understanding in journalism, the Ella Sengenberger Chapter of Quill and Scroll worked diligently to gain the best quality in newspaper and yearbook productions. Senior Jill Holmes led the journalists in preparation for the spring semester with the induction of new members. Before becoming officially admitted into the honorary organization, inductees constructed original applications and entertained at the annual spring banquet with a skit.

Foreign Exchange / cultural trade widens horizons

Glenn's American brother, junior Jeff McDermott, admires the Austrailian opals, a gift to AFS sponsor Audra Bailey.

Travel-minded students added a cosmopolitan touch to the year. Facing the challenge of new customs and languages, six linguists traveled to foreign countries; and three exchange students were greeted at Arlington.

Traveling to South America, Senior Chris Halter participated in the American Field Service program. Marja Leena Mettinen not only traveled from Finland to the United States, but also adjusted to a move from Illinois to Indiana. Other exchange students were Veronica Sanchez, Chili, and Glenn Johnston, Australia.

Sharing adventures in Mexico were seniors Linda Rosenquist and Craig May. French students Phil Gelston and Saralyn Stalcup spent the summer in France, while Mike Reap studied in Italy.

Accolade / yearbook staffers document 1970, spend weekends meeting deadlines

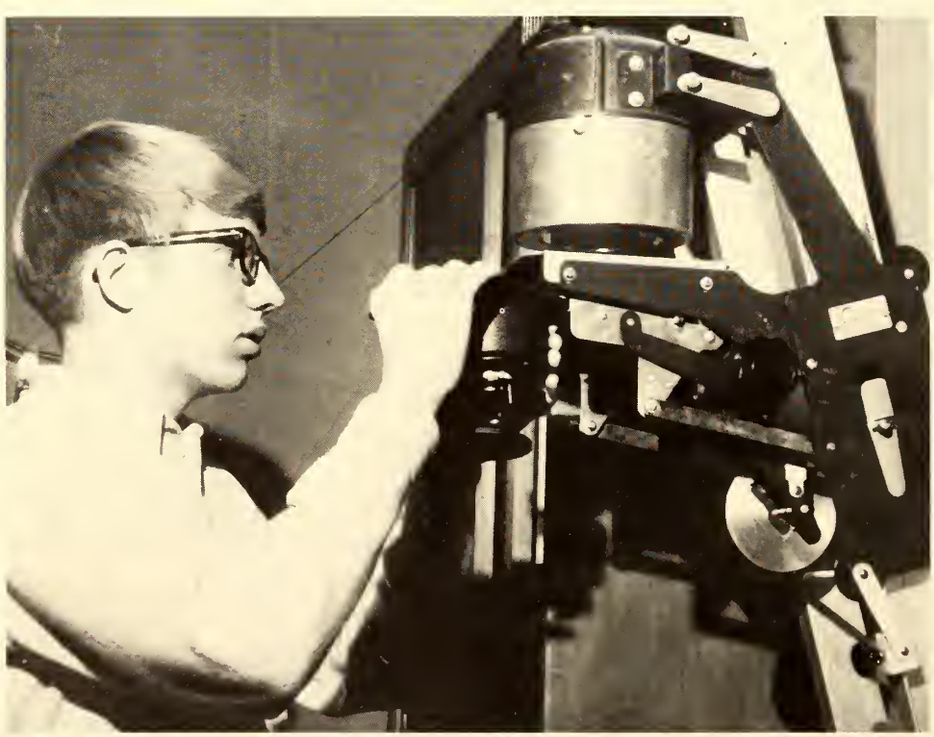

Top editors of the Accolade, seniors Cheryl Brodhecker, Mike Pence, and Kathy Routt, find themselves barred from many extra-curricular activities in order to meet pressing deadlines.

Equipped with pica rulers, imagination, and boundless ideas, the Accolade staff set out to capture the sentiment that makes the year of 1970 unique.

Typewriters clicked constantly as editors made assignments, and students gained experience in the many facets of yearbook presentation. The staff, comprised of approximately 20 students, worked daily to prepare headlines, copy, and layouts for deadlines as junior Roy Willman, photographer, captured the year with pictures.

Co-editors Kathy Routt and Cheryl Brodhecker, along with managing editor Mike Pence, found the Accolade almost a full time job. Besides planning the yearbook, the staff was also responsible for the Talent Show, underclass pictures, and a "record" of the year complete with sights and sounds to remember.

As the last of the Accolades were distributed in June, staffers felt the joy of accomplishment for one brief second and began work to prepare for the next year.

Yearbook "man in the dark" Roy Willman spent much of his time processing film and printing pictures. As chief photographer, Roy was responsible for all photos except those in the album.

Sorting and alphabetizing underclass pictures prove a tedious task for section editors.

Listening to "sounds of Arlington," John Potts and Bill Cherry tape the record of 1970.

"At least it's a break in the usual routine," Denise Fields seems to be saying to Wayne Fuson as the two take time out from their Accolade schedule to help fold Lancers on Friday morning.

Lancer / alert to decisions on current issues, reporters dig to keep pupils informed.

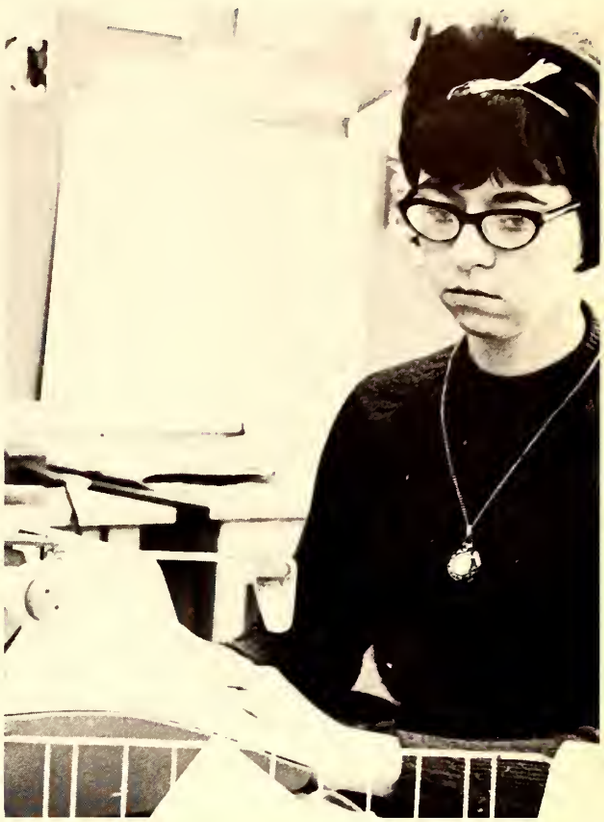

Cartoonist Willy Lanteigne finds a clever way to illustrate news features for the Lancer.

Meeting deadlines and researching articles, the Lancer staff served to inform students of their school activities and problems while linking them with the outside world.

Staff members sacrificed leisure time to deliver a paper containing up-to-date information. Headed by editor Phil Gelston, the staff strove to bring perfection to the Lancer and to project an honest reflection of the school.

Effective pictures of homecoming, sports, performances, and student accomplishments accented special news and feature stories. Taking a bold step with editorials, the staff ventured to voice its opinion on decisions by the administration, racial problems, and drugs.

To help the freshman class with their special troubles, Joe Greeson along with twenty other freshmen organized their own paper known as Knight Times.

Messengers / helpers deliver call slips, assist publications staff

Business manager Ron Miller finds the weekly distribution of Lancers a pleasant job.

In addition to the ordinary academic courses, messengers set aside a period a day to help in the administrative and counciling offices.

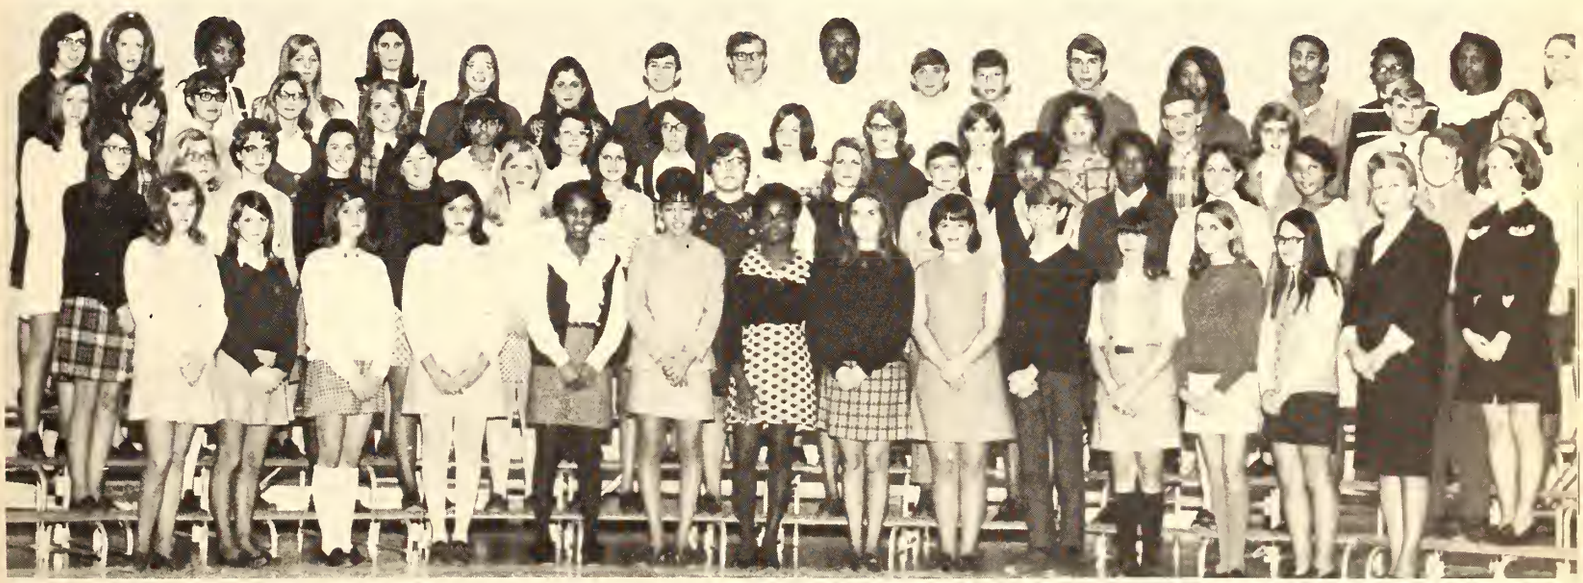

Occupied with small but important tasks, students began the semesters by assembling and delivering packets to teachers. A constant stream of call slips and messages also kept messengers busy while morning "sick calls" demanded time for sorting schedules and conveying absentee lists to teachers.

Carrying a different kind of message, Lancer representatives made a weekly trip to the Publications office for the Lancers of their appointed homerooms.

Accolade representatives assisted the yearbook staff during the fall semester by selling subscriptions for the 1970 yearbook.

To tap the potential power of language, both Thespian and National Forensics League members strove to perfect their speech and dramatic presentations.

Providing entertainment for the entire community, Thespians acted in school productions and worked backstage with costumes, make-up, props, and scenery.

Under the direction of Mrs. Daveda Wyatt, the active group climaxed the year with the annual presentation of the Thespian play. The Repertory Company, an outgrowth of the Thespians, contributed another highlight to the year with an appearance on television.

Working with the senior class, Thespians assisted in presenting "Blithe Spirit," a play written by Noel Coward. Taking place in London, the play was based on the exploits of an author who hired a spiritualistic medium to assist him in writing a book.

Acquiring self-assurance and poise, National Forensics League members earned valuable points by participating in speech meets with neighboring schools. Areas of competition ranged from poetry interpretation to fields of radio and television broadcasting.

Marching Band / band members step out into school spotlight

Assisting band director, Mr. Salzman, Mrs. Schmidt coordinates dance steps for the marching band.

Shining brass, precision marching, and gold and white pom-poms caught the eyes of spectators as the Marching Knights proudly displayed their skills in a parade of outdoor performances.

The 70-member band, accompanied by 16 pennant girls, marched in the "500" and Veteran's Day parades, while providing weekly entertainment during football season with pre-game and halftime ceremonies. Also featured with the Marching Band were eight flag twirlers, three majorettes, and feature twirler JoAnn Arbuckle. The girls, dressed in glistening black sequin leotards, performed routines in step to rhythmic melodies of the band.

Highlighting the October United Fund drive, the group also led a downtown parade for the "torch snuffing" ceremony on the Circle.

Band members combined talent with dedication to provide spirited entertainment during the year.

The Concert Band, directed by Mr. William Salzman, presented the annual "Tops in Pops" concert and Opus 9 with a musical repertoire ranging from jazz to marches. The Pops concert, which featured Miss Indianapolis, Mary Elberg, was held during the fall while the Opus 9, following in the spring semester, featured the George Nicoloss Orchestra.

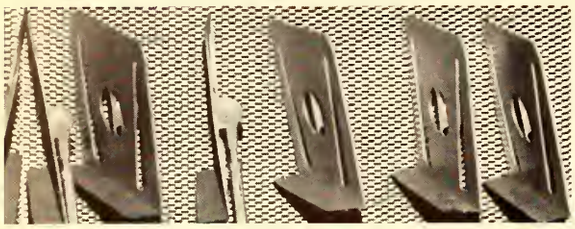

When not practicing for concerts, the musicians were busy participating in contests.

The Pep Band, composed of 25 instrumentalists, joined with the Goldenaires to perform during half-time at home basketball games.

Operating on a voluntary basis, the Pep Band offered no credit except the personal satisfaction of adding extra spirit at games.

Orchestra / musicians perfect their talents, provide community with concerts

Participating in some "friendly competition," first and second chair violinists Sharon Taylor and Mark Kresge, respectively, practice for a future orchestra performance.

Concert Orchestra members kept a busy schedule this year with performances ranging from community to school concerts

Using the money received from programs to purchase new attire, the musicians performed for the annual Christmas Concert and provided background music for the fall production of "The Sound of Music." Orchestra members also competed in the State Orchestra Contest while individual members of the group participated in solo ensemble contests and the High School All-City Symphony. Adding an extra honor to the department, the musicians journeyed to Clowes Hall to play in the Butler University Concert Series.

The String Ensemble, chosen directly from the string section of the school orchestra, performed additional concerts for various programs of civic, church, and community organizations.

Ensembles / vocalists capitalize on talent, oneness of male, female voices

With favorite choral arrangements, the Treble-Aires, along with the Flat Foot Four, provide vocal entertainment for Knights during spring Tap Day ceremonies.

Vocalists in the "sing" of things added a melodious touch to Music Department productions.

Treble-Aires, composed of 45 songsters, were chosen on the basis of poise, sightreading ability, and vocal excellence.

With the assistance of Mrs. June Edison, piano accompanist, the all-girl chorus performed in spring and fall concerts. They also sang for Tap Day ceremonies and created a festive air for Glendale shoppers during the holiday season. To lend new life to their showmanship, members made new outfits for the year's performances.

The all-male counterpart, Boys' Ensemble, held positions for 29 students. These baritones and tenors were chosen from advanced glee club organization by their vocal talents.

Mr. Ralph Horine, director of the Boys' Ensemble and Treble-Aires, selected the music and participants for the groups. Both organizations actively participated in state contests.

Vocalists / talented singers serve school, community with musical abilities

Festive tunes of "Deck the Halls" and "Silent Night" echoed through downtown Indianapolis as the Concert Choir caroled on the Circle.

Selected on the basis of ability and voice quality, the seventy-seven members performed for school activities and civic functions. Under the direction of Mr. Ralph Horine and accompanied by Mrs. June Edison, the choir's repertoire included spring and fall programs, while adding an extra spark of talent to school auditoriums. The organization also participated in the annual State Music Contest.

An additional honor, the Indiana Music Educator's Association chose the choir to present a concert at the Marott Hotel last November.

Consisting of seventeen madrigal musicians, the Arlingtones combined to form the Music Departments' exclusive vocal group. The talented vocalists averaged thirty to forty appearances, highlighted by singing for the premiere of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" at the Indiana Theatre.

Indiana's newly formed All State Choir unveiled its talent at Clowes Hall; and Arlington was represented by Kate Wichser, Marcia Reider, and Lloyd White, all senior Arlingtone members.

Red Cross members prepared an overseas chest of items for the armed forces and formed a party for the Children's Guardian Home. Sponsored by Mrs. Gladysmae Good, the club was affiliated with the Marion County High School Red Cross Organization with five delegates representing Arlington.

In association with the Indiana Health Careers Incorporation, the Health Careers Club chose one delegate to represent the club in the state organization. A Christmas party and Mental Health Gift project concluded the year's calendar.

Assistants / giving teachers 'helping hand,' aides keep records, run errands

Physical Education and Academic Assistants practiced their acquired skills as they took on the responsibilities of various departments.

Chosen on the ability of leadership, dependability, initiative, and gymnastic skill, Physical Education Assistants gave both pupils and teachers a "helping hand." Demonstrating techniques, keeping records, and running errands were all part of their busy schedule during class periods.

Academic Assistants selected the task of helping teachers of various departments to prepare class materials, as they donated one free period of their day in exchange for a small salary. Their obligations included typing and mimeographing tests, letters, notes, and routine office tasks.

Running off tests is only one of the duties of science assistant Saralyn Stalcup.

Careers / students join after-school clubs, perfect hobbies, professional goals

Minds pondered and ideas grew when students went to work using skills involved in the Chess, Electronics, Future Teachers of America, and Future Architects and Draftsmen Clubs.

Who'd want to be a teacher? Members of the FTA have their reasons for setting such a goal. Leading the club in discussions on student-teacher communications, sponsor Mrs. Margaret Janert analyzed present teaching methods. Club activities included assisting the OPT by serving refreshments at Open House and selling corsages for Homecoming festivities. The organization was also awarded for installing the John Marshall Chapter of FTA.

Focusing on creativity and talent, Future Architects and Draftsmen created model houses and trailers. Under the direction of Mr. DeWaine Metcalf, members also constructed entries for a Covered Bridge Contest and toured Weir Cook Airport Tracking Station.

Wires and gadgets of electronics were the object of attention of the Electronics Club. Hoping to obtain a home radio station at Arlington, club members operated coat checks as a means of finance.

The cry of "checkmate" was frequently heard when the Chess Club was in session. Sponsored by Miss Martha White, members discussed and debated attacks and defense while demonstrating strategic maneuvers.

Sixteen students received on-the-job training as auditorium technicians while others became skilled audio-visual assistants.

Using after-school hours to perfect their ability, technicians co-ordinated sound, lights, special effects, and curtain calls. Under the direction of Mr. John Schulz, the crew donated time to help produce plays, concerts, and auditorium programs.

Audio-visual assistants learned and perfected their skills under Mr. Irvin Cash. Their time was contributed to school service by aiding teachers with visual aids. The assistants scheduled projectors and record players, ordered films, taped P.A. skits, and helped prepare materials for the overhead projectors.

Threading projectors, staging productions, and recording PA announcements provide AV assistants with valuable experience.

The auditorium technicians apply their skills and knowledge to prepare the stage for production. Checking microphones and perfecting sound systems are among their many technical duties.

Proofs, Equations / math, science buffs pierce abstractions, work with reasoning of numbers, symbols

Symbols, formulas, and equations presented challenges to members of the Science and Math Clubs.

Scientifically oriented students found that the Science Club offered information about physical and biological fields of technology. Sponsoring the club, Mr. Robert McClary took the group on frequent field trips and attended monthly lectures by guest speakers.

While the Science Club was occupied with the scientific aspects of the technical world, the Math Club, led by Miss Martha Burton, pondered the intricacies of math. New mathematical challenges were constantly presented and discussed.

Science Seminar members, guided by Mr. Merle Wimmer, spent their Saturdays attending lectures at Indiana University Medical Center.

Language Clubs / bilingual students explore unique customs of other countries through group-projects

Seeking a better understanding of the world around them, German Club members supplemented class studies with cultural exchange meetings among the language clubs. Members also produced a German newspaper "Der Ritter" under the guidance of Mrs. Pamela Ruble, and heard guest speaker Mr. David Blase relate his recent travels through Germany.

Creating a new image this year, the French Club boasted a record membership and two new sponsors, as they furthered their knowledge of French customs. Under the direction of Mrs. Jan Duggan and Miss Anne Jeffery, club members visited Clowes Hall to see Marcel Marceau, and journeyed to Vincennes to the site of a French fort.

Spanish Club members continued to increase their knowledge of Spanish culture with summer exchange students Linda Rosenquist and Craig May.

Other items on the club's agenda included a trip to Clowes, a Spanish Banquet, and a dinner at a Spanish restaurant.

Special Interests / ask questions, study past

Historically intrigued—from the fading of age-old civilizations to the hopes and challenges of a young republic—Knights of History researched, debated, and reviewed the historical and cultural movement of the past and present. Along with the annual fall convention at Spring Mill Park, the club members were busy at home games working the concession stands to earn needed funds and presenting historical plays at the Indianapolis Children's Museum.

Exploring the ancient as well as the present, Latin Club members studied the foundations of modern languages. Through songs, skits, banquets, and guest speakers, members extended their knowledge of Latin from class time to cover interest areas. Mike Reap, president, spent the summer in Italy with the Honors Program for high school students of Latin.

For their second year, the Bible Club was active in debate, caroling, sponsoring guest speakers, and on special holidays, helping the needy. A new addition to the club was the Invitational Bible Bowl Tournament in which Arlington, Lawrence, and Marshall participated. The group caroled downtown over the Christmas holidays and also sang on a radio program.

ROTC / cadets prepare for armed forces service, master basic drill, fighting principles

A steady aim and shooting precision are the goals of Rifle Team member Dale Ranck as he prepares for an elimination meet.

ROTC Drill and Rifle Teams adapted to the role of representing Arlington to the community in interscholastic competition.

The Drill Team, under the guidance of Sgt. Blackburn, participated in city, regional, and state meets, while the "Mini" Drill Team received the title of the "Outstanding Jr. ROTC Drill Unit." The Drill Team also marched in the Lawrence and Veteran's Day Parades.

The Rifle Team maintained a "sharpshooting" image by competing with other city teams. Sponsored by Sgt. Pennington, the team also participated in three city meets.

ROTC's female sponsors played an active part in all phases of the battalions' actions. Inspecting uniforms and aiding in drills, the sponsors formed an integral part of the ROTC chapter.

Fine Arts / art, literature, camera buffs expand their knowledge, skills

Officers of the Camera Club, junior Dan Ratz and junior Steve Click, set up a temporary darkroom with their home equipment in a first floor custodian closet.

Students pursued interests in various forms of expression through the Book, Camera, and Art Clubs.

With their sponsor, Mr. James Urbain, members of the Book Club explored the varied fields of poetry and held discussions over novels the club read as a group. Members worked a coat check at one basketball game for funds to buy books for club use.

Members of the Art Club visited the Herron Art Museum, the Lilly homes, now the home of the Indianapolis Art Pavilion, and other special art exhibits. With the aid of sponsor Mrs. Margery Hindman, club members carried on the traditions of painting scenery for the annual musical and sponsoring an all-school art contest.

In its second year as an official school club, the Camera Club continued to pursue the art of photography with a small janitor's room used as a darkroom. The club benefitted from guest speakers in related fields and illustrated "Reflections" guided by their sponsor, Mr. Robert Jeffery.

To be INspired
To feel a joy of victory,
Pride of team effort.

To strain past the point
Of endurance to make
That final point;
To practice hours
For a game. To be rewarded
By an enthusiastic crowd.

To know the frustrations
Of being on the sideline
Unable to make
That last winning effort,
To capture team spirit
And hold it secure,
Even when the game
Is over and lost.

To know the thrill
Of spirited competition
And have the pride
And self-confidence;
To hold your head high.

Lettermen contribute skill to athletics

While the upperclassmen and more experienced lettermen participate in an athletic contest, three younger athletes ride the bench hoping to someday become a Lettermen's Club member.

Composed of dedicated athletes, the Lettermen's Club represents the entire athletic program. Co-sponsors of the third annual Athletic Day, the club members worked with Fellowship of Christian Athlete huddle groups from Lawrence, Warren, and Franklin to plan the event held at Franklin Central.

Selected Lettermen participated in a Walker Research study to sample food, enabling them to raise money. They also sponsored an annual Lettermen's sock hop which was held after the Marshall basketball game. Other activities included a fund drive in the spring for Multiple Sclerosis.

Chosen by the student body through the Spirit Committee, Susie Ault was voted an honorary Letterman as Jamboree queen.

Sharing the grip of a gridiron football, Lettermen's Club president Mike Seamon congratulates Jamboree Queen Susie Ault. Susie was chosen as queen by members of the entire student body.

Non-lettermen had the chance to win their award by competing in varsity sports. Junior Jim Stonecipher earned his "A" sweater through his achievements on the basketball court.

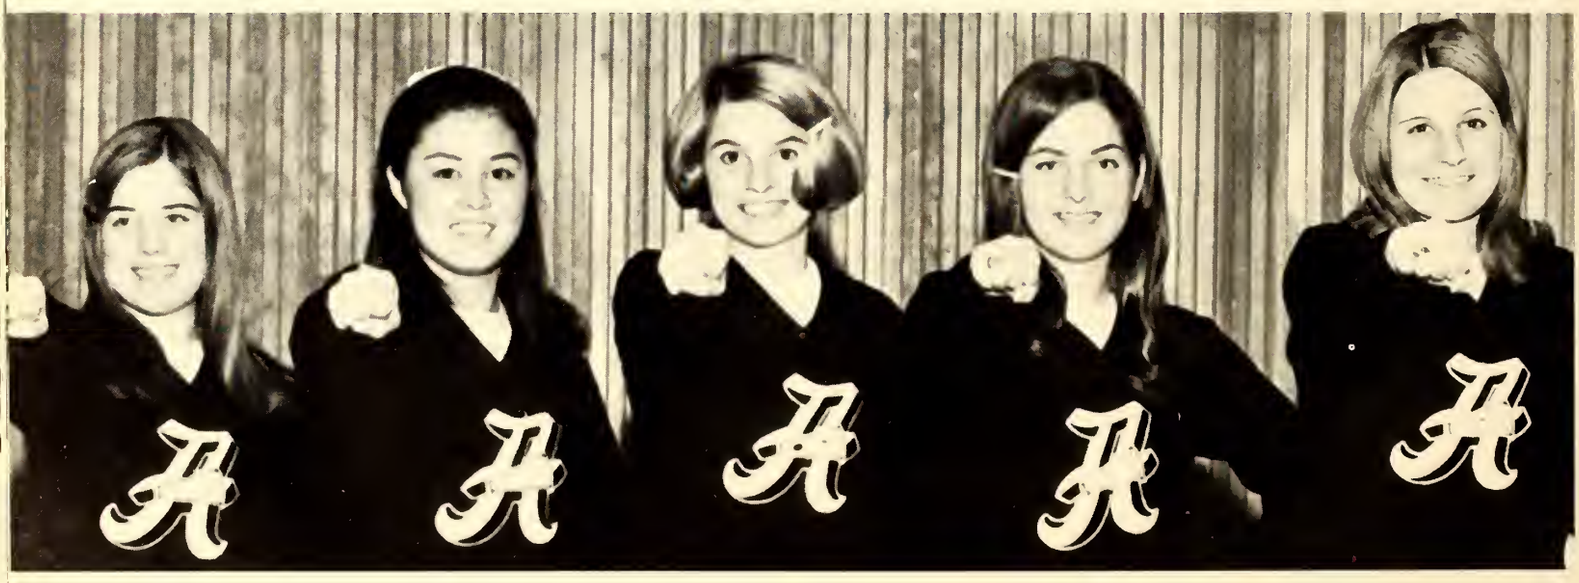

Cheerleaders spark spirited student body lead athletes to success

Determination, inspiration, and unemotional excitement are on the faces of these varsity yell-leaders as they prepare themselves for one of Arlington's many spirit packed events.

It is not every year that superior cheerleaders support superior athletic teams; however, 1969-70 has been different at Arlington. This year's varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders have obtained superior talent ratings throughout the Midwest. Placing first in their individual division, the varsity squad ranked a high second behind two-year state champ Chatard at the annual State Cheerleading Day held at Indiana University.

The squad started earning recognition last summer when they attended the Kentucky Cheerleading Clinic at Lexington, where they earned their second superior rating and a second place over-all finish. Supporting the varsity, along with cheering for the reserve teams, the junior varsity also received superior ratings; and at the Kentucky summer conference, they received excellent ranking. Cheerleaders earn their positions by winning at tryouts.

Backing the junior varsity in both basketball and football, along with giving help to the varsity cheerleaders, the junior varsity spirit backers are (left to right) squad captain Nancy King, Pam Jessup, Sharon Kelley, Diane Conesm and Karroll Kelley.

Chosen a year ago along with the junior varsity, the varsity cheerleaders are the "people's choice." Picked by the student body, the "varsity gals" are (row one) Laura Woods, Nancy Meek, Judy Hartley, Denise Marietta. (row two) Marcy Seybold, Beth Loveless, and Sherry Newhouse.

Hoping to someday become an Arlington cheerleader, Rhonda Lostutter dreams of the future.

Freshmen cheerleaders who have a goal of becoming a reserve or varsity backer include (from top) Nancy Snyder, Susie McAlister, Ann Ikawa, Melonie Hamilton, and Anita Cones.

Building year becomes 6-4 winning year

For the second straight year, the experts who predict grid performances misread Knight potential. Picked to win only one game, and with a team built around four returning lettermen, Kuntz's inspired "kids" rebounded from a poor Jamboree showing to win their first five games--a school record.

It all started with a thrilling one-point decision over Lawrence Central. Next in line were Scecina, Northwest, Warren, and Manual. Arlington gained a fifteenth place in the state. Then "disaster" hit. The Knights lost to city champ Howe, then to Carmel and North Central, before coming back to beat Attucks. With a 7-3 season in sight, the Knights lost to Ripple 8-7, and finished with a winning 6-4 record.

While their friends and fellow teammates carry on the contest, senior letterman Bruce Kelley and sophomore Eddie Hamilton, both injured in practice, play along on the sidelines.

The varsity linemen include (row one) Gary Gorbett, Tom King, Bernie Berry, Rodger Bender, Danny Henthorn, Mark Stevens. (row two) Mike Seamon, Pat Holmes, Tom Quigley, Frank Wallace, Kenny White, Rick Grunnert. (row three) Bill Carr, Steve Werner, Dennis Brown, Howard McPeek, Rick Young, Howard Holifield. (row four) Jim DeCamp, Don Thrasher, Larry Spilbeler, Craig Romeril, Mike Hutchison, Jack Fobes. (row five) Geof Rout, Jerry Eidson, Wayne Fuson, Lloyd Bridges, Jeff Krienik, Steve Bishop, Tim Lael. (row six) Greg Stearns, Jim Mitchell, Phil Vogelgesang, Coach Bill Kuntz, Bob Kraucunas, Coach Joe Dezalan, Joe Bennett, Jeff Stearns, Tom Valdez.

Arlington's first city championship football team in '70? It just might happen. The varsity's seventeen returning lettermen will be bolstered by the stalwarts of a junior varsity squad which this season finished second in the city with an 8-1-1 mark. The junior Knights topped Lawrence, Warren, Scecina, Northwest, Howe, Roncalli, Attucks, and Broad Ripple. A tie with Manual knocked Arlington out of the city title. North Central was the only team able to beat the J-V's. Although the freshman team's record was 3-4-2, a number of first-year players are expected to move up into the ranks of varsity competition for the '70 season. The freshmen won victories over Roncalli, Northwest, and Attucks . . . losing to Ripple, Howe, Creston, and Manual. They tied Belzer and Scecina.

Glancy sets scoring pace for hoopmen

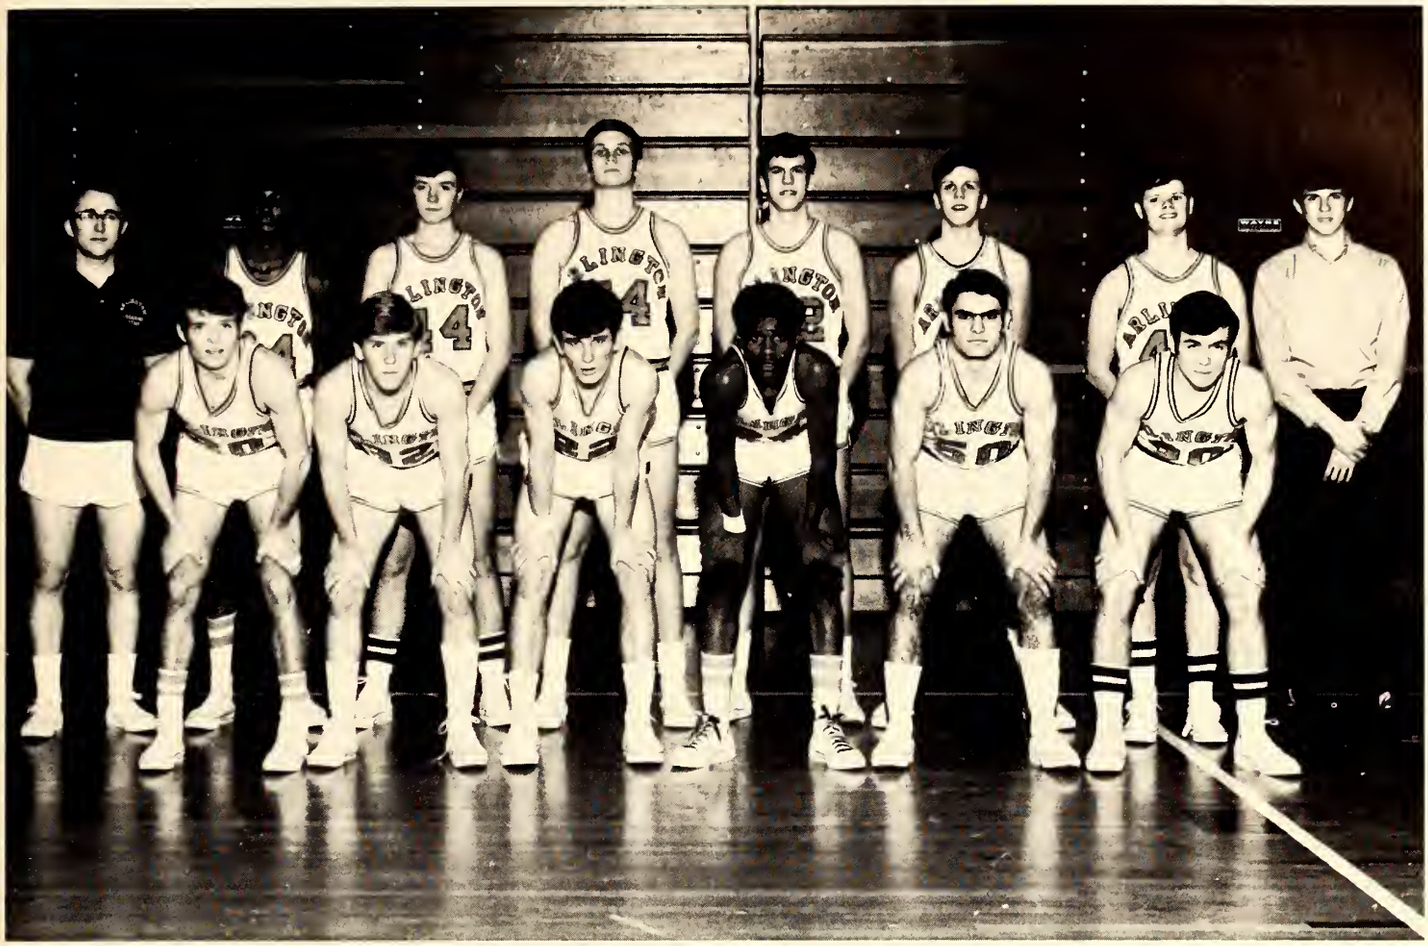

With a team built around high scoring senior Mike Glancy, varsity head coach Don Lostutter steered the varsity hoopmen toward an 8-13 season record. Although failing to find a winning combination in their first three games, the team rebounded to down rival Marshall in the first city tournament win ever. They defeated defending state champ Washington in the final game of the season only to be disappointed by a powerful Attucks squad in the first game of the sectional.

Mike Glancy rewrote all Arlington scoring records with a career total of 1003 points. He broke the single game record with a 51-point outburst against county champ North Central. Sporting a 27-point average for the entire season, Mike ranked third in total city scoring.

Jim Seamon, Bob Maas, Bob Riley, and Gary Ramage round out the senior stalwarts on the squad. Juniors Skip Fisher, Jim Stonecipher, and Bob Mesalam, along with sophomores Rod Scott, Eric Nickleson, and Dave Oliver will return as lettermen to bolster the '70 varsity team.

● Watching in dejection, senior cheerleader Nancy Meek and Donna Lostutter dream of a victory.

The members of the varsity basketball team are: (row one, left to right) Gary Ramage, Keith DeTrude, Dave Oliver, Rod Scott, Bob Mesalam, and Jimmy Seamon. (second row) Varsity coach Donald Lostutter, Eric Nichleson, Jimmy Stonecipher, Mike Glancy, Bob Maas, Skip Fisher, Robert Riley, and varsity manager John Munchel. Varsity of the future win as reserves

Sophomore Gerald Townes grimaces as his fellow teammate Eddie Hamilton and a determined opponent also grab for possession of the loose ball.

The varsity basketball team of 1970 will be bolstered by members of a reserve squad which had a winning 11-9 season. Coach Rollin Cutter's team, consisting of eleven sophomores and one junior, played its first winning season in the last three years.

They lost their first four games, but using teamwork and a balanced scoring attack, won their next seven straight games. Hopes of becoming a city champ were dwindled when Howe defeated the Junior Varsity in a semi-final contest. After the city competition, the reserves went on to play .500 and won four out of their last eight games.

Freshman coach John Allen's squad which featured Otto McGee, ran its tally to a record of 7-12. The frosh team defeated Chatard, Tech, Scecina, Shortridge, Ritter, Attucks, and Ben Davis.

Freshman team member Randy Shouse catches his opponent off guard and uses his mistake as a free chance to score an easy two points.

Matmen tally 4-7 season

Coaching his ninth Arlington wrestling team, varsity coach James Ellis watches intently.

In an effort to fill the vacant positions created by nine lettermen who graduated last year, this years varsity wrestling squad could not find the formula for a winning combination. They ended the season with a record of 4-7.

Senior stalwart Bruce Kelley, compiled twenty-one straight victories on his way to the city championship and the Warren Central sectional titles. His hopes of becoming another Arlington state champ were only wishes when he was beaten in the Arlington regional.

Seniors Bob Lappas, Keith Rhodes, junior Gary Kestner, and sophomore Doug Molin strengthened coach Jim Ellis' team during its rebuilding season. Placing seventh in the city tournament, the matmen finished with high individual honors. The lone champion, Bruce Kelley, was preceded by a second place by Doug Molin and a third by junior Gary Kestner. With four returning lettermen and the reserve strength, the '70 season should bolster a strong squad.

Anxiously awaiting the start of his own individual match, senior Scott MacPherson watches one of his fellow teammates become victorious over a dejected opponent.

City and sectional champion Bruce Kelley uses his versatile "Kelley roll" in decisioning many of his opponents. Winning twenty-one straight matches through his junior and senior year, Bruce becomes another heavyweight wrestler in Knight history.

Sophomore Doug Molin channels strength, stamina, and strategy into reversing his position on the mat. Working his way through Reserve practices, regulations, and competition, Doug earned his place on the '70 Varsity squad. The Reserves finished the season with a 10-1 record.

Reserve wrestlers roll to 10-1 record

Using tactics learned in practice, junior wrestler Bob Graeber gains points on his opponent. Graeber, a standout on the Reserve squad, will vie for a Varsity position.

"A year of the heavyweights," wrestling was a constant challenge as coach Elmer Callaway guided the reserve team to a winning season. Reserve wrestlers, led by first year heavyweight Jeff Stearns, finished with a season record of 10-1. Placing fourth in the city tournament, the team boasted two individual standouts, sophomore Dave Kitcoff and the number twelve man Stearns. Dave won first place honors while Jeff placed second in the junior varsity city meet. Stearns, before entering city competition, had an unblemished record by decisioning all of his opponents.

Defeated only by North Central, matmen earned victories over Shortridge, Carmel, Scecina, Manual, Tech, Northwest, Washington, Ripple, Warren, and Howe.

Coach John Manka's freshmen grapplers finished their first year with a season record of 2-8. Losing the first four meets, the frosh came on to beat Wood and Warren Central.

Batmen seek to lengthen string of wins

Boasting a 16-6-1 record, coach Don Shambough's diamondmen posted a third successive winning season. Strikeout pitchers Glen Moses and Terry Zimpleman, aided by strong batting, produced a well-balanced team.

Hopes for a 1970 winning season were high as eight lettermen returned to the squad. Steve Draughon, Mike Glancy, Tom Meara, Terry Moore, Rodney Scott, Jim Seamon, Mike Seamon, and Randy Wells held down key positions for the varsity squad.

The batting machine, a new addition to indoor practices, provided the batmen with further batting experience before the season opened. Working as a mechanical pitcher, the machine threw whiffle balls to the players. Bad weather kept the boys inside and slowed preparation for the first games.

Although the varsity diamondmen dropped their season opener with North Central, they defeated Roncalli in the second game of the season.

The varsity raquetmen were coached by Mr. Lyman Combs.

Linksters, racquetmen swing victories

Whether grabbing a racquet or a club, spring athletes practiced diligently in anticipation of winning seasons. March marked the start of practice with actual competition beginning in early April.

With team spirit and pressure on individuals, varsity linksters began preparation for an April 9 opening match with city foe Scecina. Under the direction of head coach John Manka, seniors John Hall and Russ Palma, and junior Bill Parrish were the top contributors in their 15 dual meets, 4 three-way meets, and one invitational tournament.

Combining elements of track, cross country, and basketball in their practices, racquetmen gained the necessary agility and endurance for their matches throughout the season. Coach Lyman Combs had high hopes for his well-rounded squad led by senior Tom Quigley, juniors Paul Reifeis, Steve Smith, Phil Vogelsang, and sophomore Don Crowe who provided the nucleus for the team.

Cindermen fire up with daily practice

Arlington teammates, Don Lawhorn and Tom Beavers put forth an extra effort to gain a winning position for their team in the low hurdle race during the Arlington-Cathedral meet.

Neither rain, sleet nor snow kept Arlington tracksters from practice. Guiding the cindermen to a stronger team, coach Bill Bennett drilled the boys continuously from February until the end of the season. A typical distanceman's workout consisted of running a half-mile, ten consecutive quarters with ninety seconds between each, and eight 220's. Practice concluded with a half-mile warm up.

Before the season began for the Knights, the team performed against Warren Central during a practice meet. The season officially opened March 19 during the Hoosier Relays at Indiana University's indoor track. The trials lasted a total of four days. Representing Arlington with high ratings were junior Don Jones in the pole vault event and seniors Dane Phillips and Tom Burleson as distance runners. Senior Gary Ramage earned high recognition throughout the entire track season for his fine performance.

GAA stresses brotherhood

Offering an opportunity to be active in after-school sports, the Girl's Athletic Association involved over three hundred girls. This year brotherhood was stressed as the girls participated in activities such as tennis, volleyball, kickball, gymnastics, and basketball.

Fifty of the girls worked hard enough to earn the needed points to become official members of the organization. Under the direction of Miss Anna Wessel, and student president, Cathy Clark, girls met the first Tuesday of each month.

Basketball, volleyball, and kickball emphasized team competition while strengthening good sportsmanship in the athletic minded girls.

Demonstrating skills ranging from tumbling to precision parallel bar routines, qualified girls were chosen for the gymnastic team. Under the supervision of Mrs. Burdeen Schmidt, the fifteen members practiced each week.

Bowlers 'strike' on Tuesday

Junior Denins Williams very carefully practices to raise his league average. Series at left: Perfecting the correct style for bowling is the major importance in learning the skill of the sport. At the left are the first three steps of bowling.

With competitive spirit to "spare", Bowling League members practiced weekly, improving their scores for future games.

Divided into two leagues, Arlington I and Arlington II, the members traveled to the Hindle Bowling Lanes each Tuesday. Randy Staughton and Bill Favors earned top honors in the first league while Jim Heimroth and Rick Cagle consistently led the second league. Mike Williams and Ann Pickard showed the most improvement during the season.

As a part of her first year in the physical education department, Miss Anna Wessel took over sponsorship of the team. Second year president Debbie Richeson helped organize activities.

Trophies and plaques were awarded at the annual bowling league coke party held in the school cafeteria. Awards were given to the top boy and girl in each league who had scored the highest average throughout the season. Certificates were also given to the teams who finished in the first five spots in each one of the two respective bowling leagues.

In the 1969-70 world of sports, upsets were not uncommon; and feminine football was no exception. The second annual Powderpuff football game was a contest filled with surprising and spirit-packed gridiron skill as the upperclass females shed skirts and purses to pick up their jerseys and football.

After many hours of organized parking lot practices under the supervision of junior coach John Eiler and senior coach Joe Draughon, the two rival classes competed under the stadium lights in a game of "flag" football.

The "underdog" juniors surprised the experienced seniors by an "upsetting" 34-28 victory while the antics of the junior and senior male cheerleaders highlighted pregame and half-time activities.

The game, sponsored by the Spirit Committee, gave girls a chance to understand the strategy and rules of the game and to feel equal to their male counterparts.

Faculty trounces seniors in hardwood comedy

Playing in only a few minutes of the game proved to be too much for vice-principal Robert Turner. In a wheelchair pushed by trainer Bill Orme he makes his exit.

For the fourth consecutive year, the fearless faculty stomped the seniors in the annual Senior-Faculty hoop encounter.

From the opening tip-off to the final buzzer, the teachers out-shot and outrebounded the seniors, ending their Oscar winning performance with a final score of 45-29.

The faculty team, sporting distinctive uniforms labeled with movie titles, included Steve "Rachael, Rachael" Rifner, Joe "The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly" Draughon, Dick Murphy, Dewaine "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" Metcalf, Paul Hutson, Wallace "The Fox" Hartman, vice-principal Robert Turner, Dave Oberting, Lyman "Candy" Coombs, Alan Eiler, Don White, Thomas "Myra Breckinridge" Chapman, Marty "Chitty, Chitty, Bang, Bang" Rohrman, William Fellows, and William Orme.

An intramural game featuring the Leftovers and the Weisers provided pre-game entertainment for the Senior Faculty Game. Sponsored by coach Joe Draughon, the freshman-sophomore intramurals met on Mondays while the junior-senior teams met on Wednesday.

Spectators view Goldenaire sparkle

Highlighting their half-time performances, members of the Goldenaire squad created the annual Christmas tree formation.

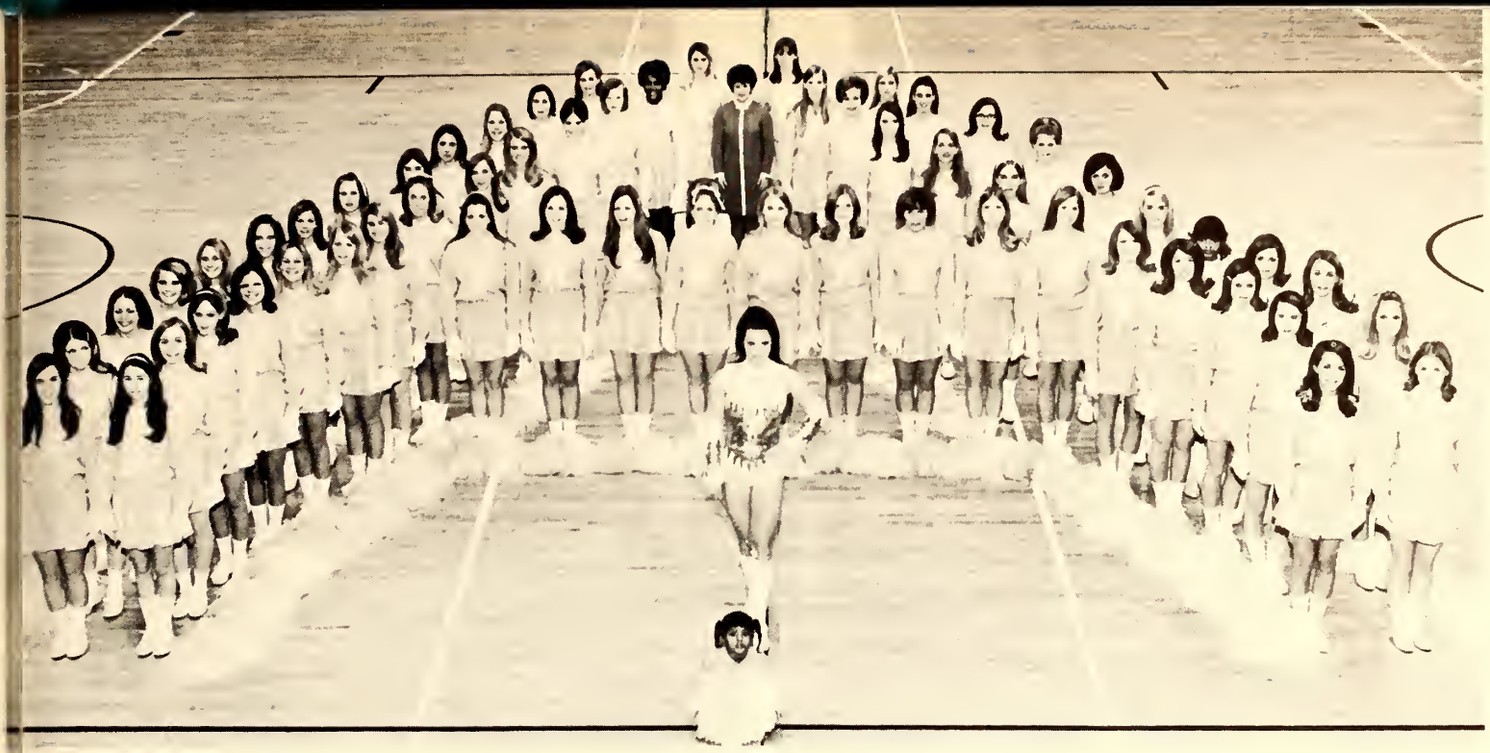

Home basketball and football games were highlighted again this season by the performance of sixty-one high-spirited Goldenaires. They contributed their sparkle, rythmn and dance style at nine basketball half-time shows and at five football games during the year.

Special appearances featured junior gymnast Don Jones, sophomore twirler JoAnn Arbuckle, and the flag and pennant corps doing unique dance routines. Four-year old Tracy Cardwell, this year's mascot, highlighted several performances by marching with the girls as an added attraction.

The Goldenaires practiced approximately four hours every week, creating and perfecting their original dance and marching routines. Mrs. Burdeen Schmidt, sponsor of the squad, worked with the girls each coordinating performances and suggesting routines.

To be an INdividual
To establish a means
Of self-expression;

To be easily recognized
As a distinct personality
Yet a part of the whole.
To shape an identity
By the choice of clothes,
Words of expression,
And actions performed.

To excel in some way
And stand apart;
To enjoy the diversities
Of a dance routine,
The thoughtfulness
Of a chess game.

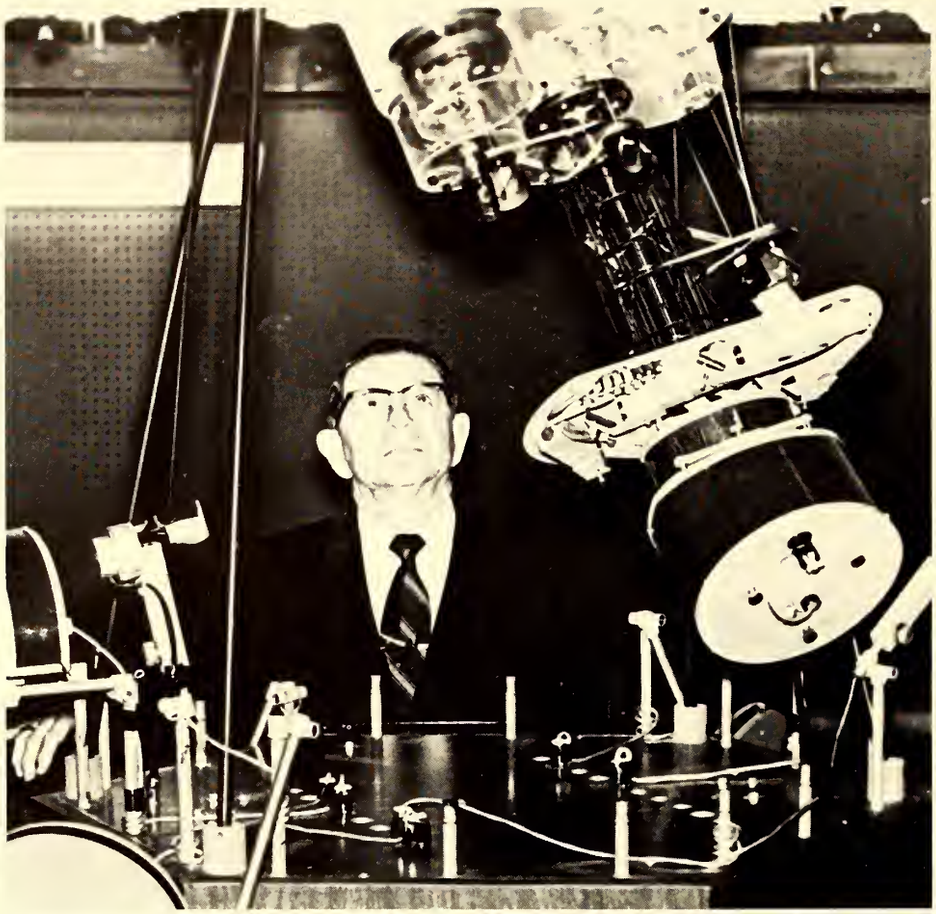

To weave each idea
And interest to create
A distinct trademark,
Expressing with pride
A uniqueness . . .
To be "100 per cent me."

Album

November 8, 1968 . . . "A magnificent community endeavor," the stadium mortgage goes in flames.

February 15, 1965 . . . "Ours was the first high school planetarium in Indiana."

A principal part of AHS

For seniors graduation is the first step towards the fulfillment of a goal; but for Principal Ralph Clevenger, retirement is the last step towards a goal already completed. A "milestone of accomplishment," his nine years of administration were highlighted by the dedication of the planetarium, the building of the stadium, and the achievement of a state championship title in wrestling. Ending his 42 years in the educational field, his last official act was to host the National Student Council Convention.

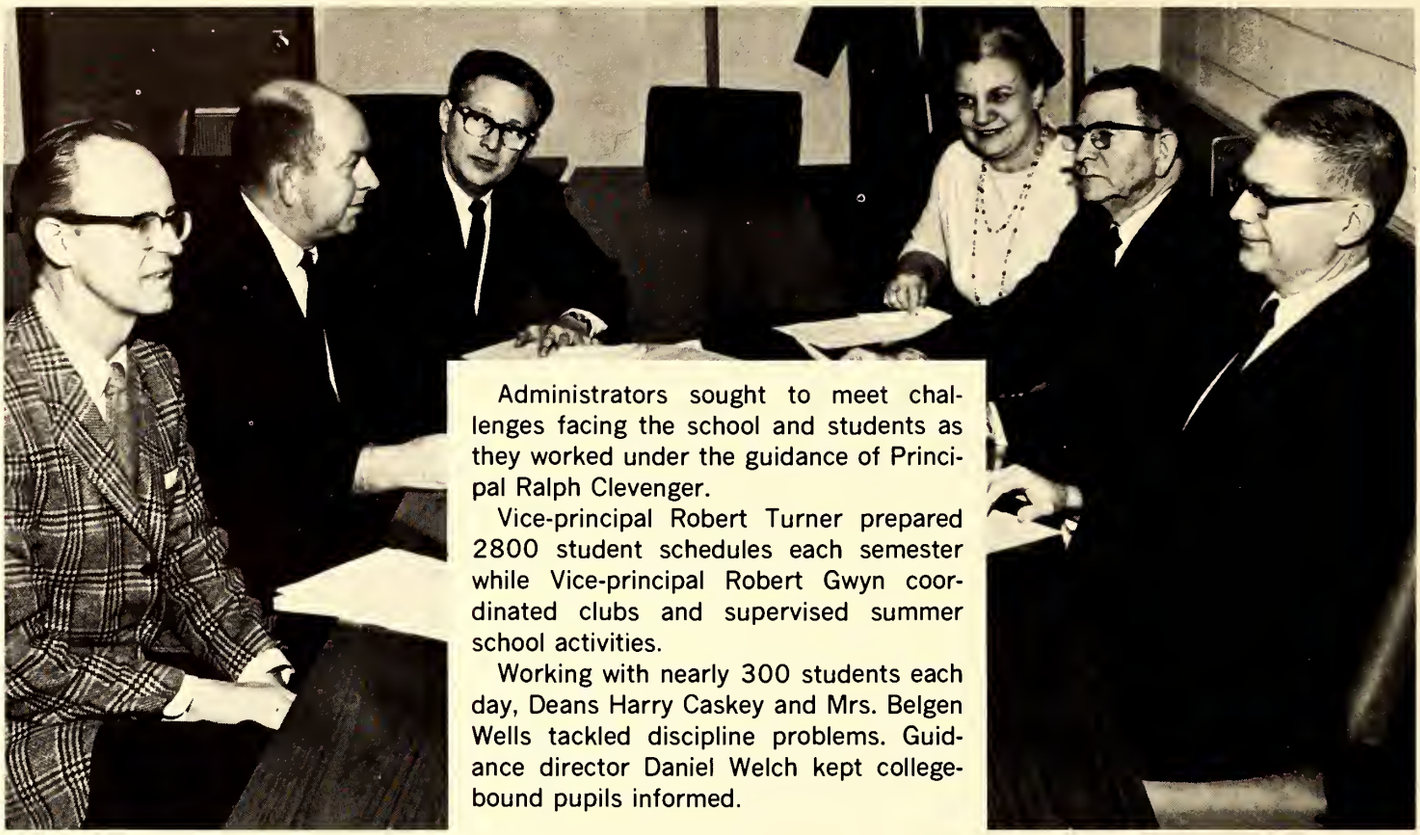

September 4, 1961 . . . "Here we witnessed the opening of another great institution which will serve boys and girls for a half century." The first flag raising symbolized the opening of Arlington.

An individual can
. . . be in a crowd
And be unique;
. . . be by himself
And not be lonely;
. . . understand others
And know himself better;
. . . be willing to follow
But able to lead;
. . . work with others
Yet be independent;
. . . share his joy
And enjoy the giving of it;
. . . help others
And never ask for thanks;
. . . reach the end of one road
And see a new one opening.
That individual is Mr. Clevenger.

Administrators / in contact with students, leaders develop lines of communication, solve pressing school dilemmas

Administrators sought to meet challenges facing the school and students as they worked under the guidance of Principal Ralph Clevenger.

Vice-principal Robert Turner prepared 2800 student schedules each semester while Vice-principal Robert Gwyn coordinated clubs and supervised summer school activities.

Working with nearly 300 students each day, Deans Harry Caskey and Mrs. Belgen Wells tackled discipline problems. Guidance director Daniel Welch kept college-bound pupils informed.

Faculty / staff creates climate for learning, sets stage for educational drama

Faculty members ranged in service from one to nine years as they worked with students during classes and in after-school activities.

Attending professional meetings, grading tests and homework teachers accepted duties that included lunchroom and study hall supervision while 26 faculty members also remained after school hours to sponsor student clubs. In addition to open houses, each teacher signed up to help at two school functions during the year.

Looking over music hand-printed on sheets of sheepskin paper, Principal Ralph Clevenger and Art Department head Mr. John Simpson talk about the department's unusual collection.

Surveying the action on the playing field, athletic coaches keep tabs from atop the stadium.

During the summer, teachers attend a school board meeting concerning their salaries.

Cooks, Custodians / run school behind scene

Working behind the scenes, cooks and custodians kept one step ahead of students and faculty, preparing for the daily influx of people.

Under the direction of Mrs. Marjorie Massingale, 36 employees prepared and served over 70 pies and 400 cold sandwiches a day, keeping the kitchen running smoothly.

Washing boards and sweeping floors, custodians were also a familiar sight while watchmen kept 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. security vigils.

Caught in class politics, Dan Cooper shows his neutral stand to Mrs. Margaret Jannert.

Class of '70 / seniors gain status, live in a world of their own

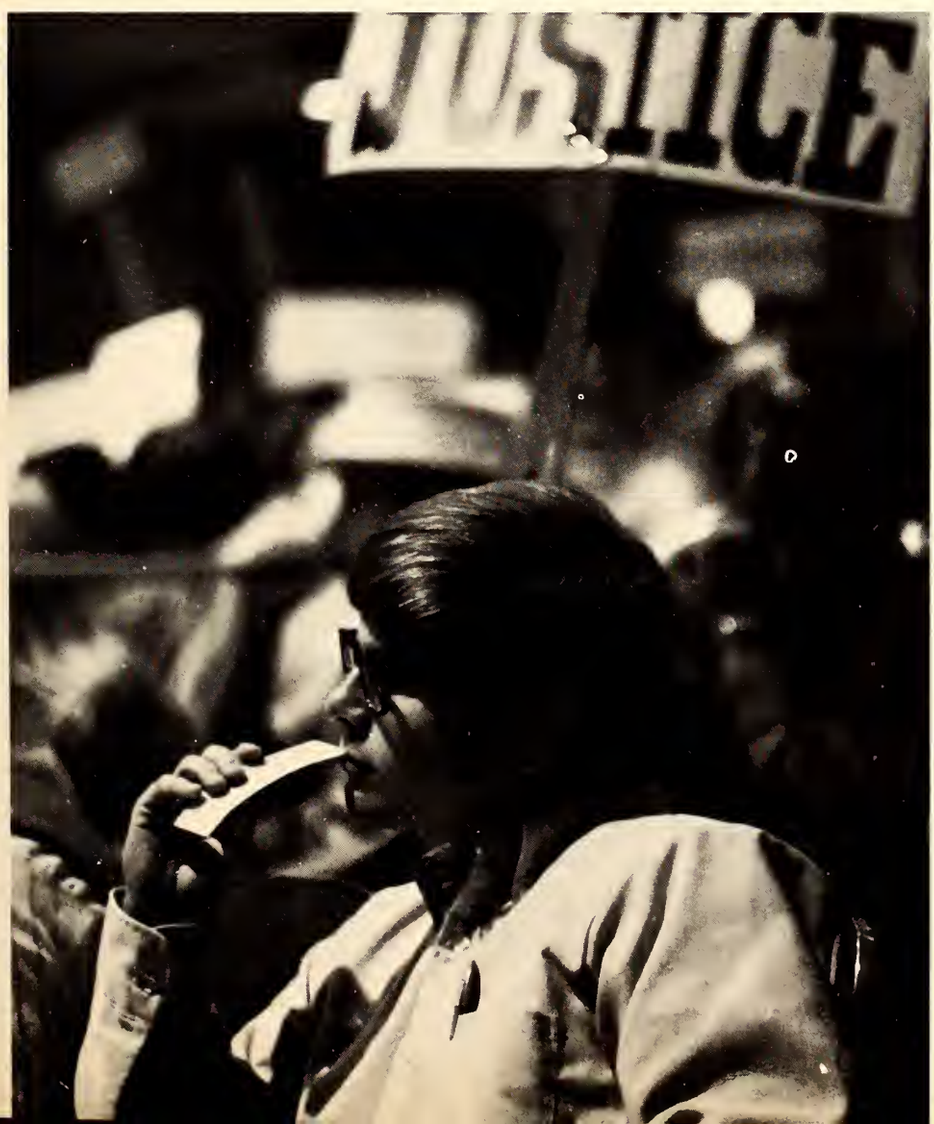

Early thoughts of graduation enter the minds of seniors as they select cards and announcements.

Seniority . . . Freshmen dream it, sophomores wish it, juniors anticipate it, and seniors have it. Familiar phrases of "Gimme an S" and "this is the senior line" were spoken only from the lips of seniors.

Characterized by the colors brown and beige, the Class of 1970 became involved in "a world of their own". Senior activities ranged from sponsoring a Senior-Alumni Party to a sock hop to a Senior-Faculty Basketball game. The class also participated in a mock election and went on to produce the comedy "Blithe Spirit".

1970 . . . A year of involvement where "Senioritis" prevailed as the class enjoyed the traditions and privileges of its final year. It also brought the end of a world they had come to know and the beginning of a new world just around the corner.

Putting aside homework, Libby Cochran reflects upon the stress and fatigue of rehearsal.

Federalist delegate Steve Draughon ponders a difficult decision during mock elections.

To meet tomorrow

Anxiously to await the remaining days until graduation, secretly to wonder where time has gone. To cling to the security of yesterday, yet to yearn for the independence of tomorrow.

To experience the last flings of childhood while trying to understand conflicting cries: "act like an adult" and "you aren't so grown up" and take them in stride. No more a child, not yet an adult, but striving to combat both opposing forces.

To leave behind the carefree days, to face reality as a young adult. To dream about the world of college . . . business . . . marriage as tomorrow becomes today and yesterday fades from view.

To accept a diploma, and with it the commencement of two worlds.

Class of '71/after three-year exposure, juniors catch senioritis

As seniors prepared to step from the honored ranks of upperclassmen, the class of '71 anxiously anticipated the coming year.

Important dates in U.S. history and the intricacies of a chemical formula made juniors aware of that "upperclass feeling." An "air" for victory coincided as the class found its place in the annual Powderbowl game.

The Junior Prom and Junior Mother's Tea headed the year's social activities.

For the college bound junior, preparation began with the administering of aptitude tests while each student continued his search for a suitable college.

As the year ended, juniors looked forward to catching that dreaded disease known as "senioritis."

"Baby Huey" Stonecipher starts his "engine" as he competes with the junior boys in a race. Junior girls huddle in a powderbowl plot. Finding the best spot to work helps Janis Brown with one of her term paper problems.

Supporting a Knight football game, cheering juniors raise their banner proudly as they give a "sign" of their school spirit to the team.

Class of '72/ sophs drop 'youngest set,' retain unique identities

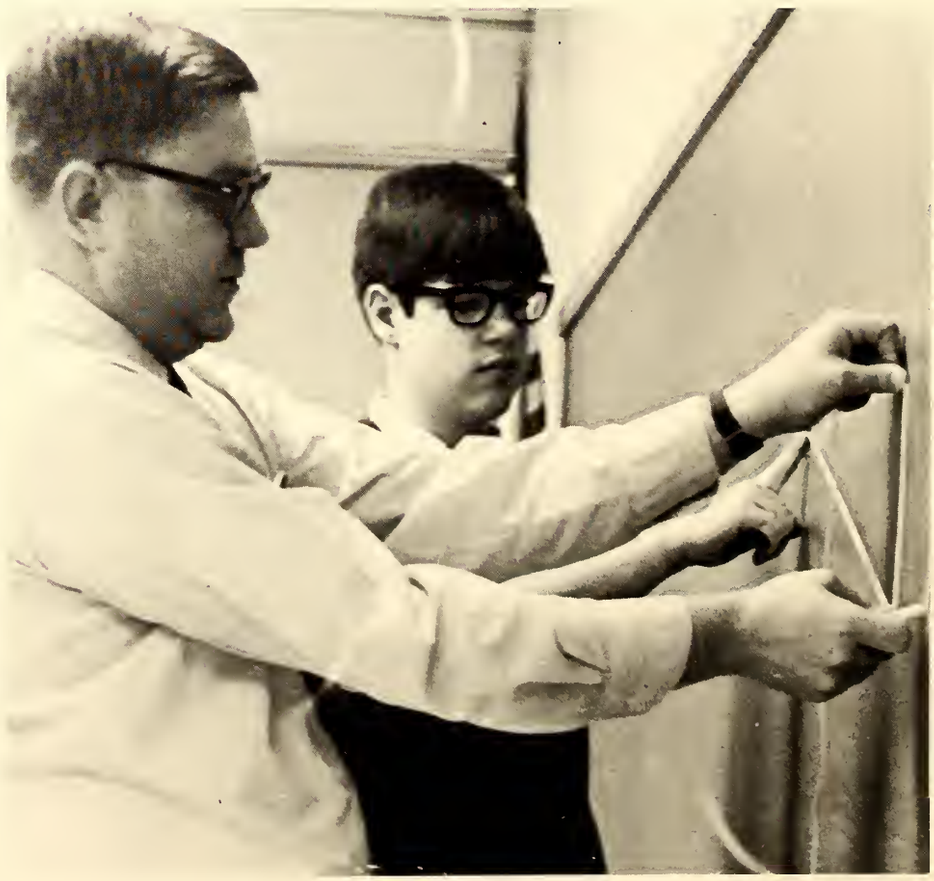

Still beneath the ranks of upperclassmen, but more seasoned than they were as freshmen, sophomores eagerly strove to retain their identity while becoming more involved in the Knight world.

Enrolling in the usual second year subjects, students braved the theories and postulates of geometry and became skilled in the art of dissecting frogs.

Sophomore athletes entered the reserve squads in preparation for future varsity teams as spirited girls enthusiastically supported them through reserve cheerleading and Goldenaires.

Marking the halfway point of their high school career, members of the class of '72 displayed their school spirit as they purchased class rings. With their newly acquired knowledge and status, sophomores prepared to enter the next phase on the way to graduation.

Class of '73 / freshmen 'sound off' as record number join events

The first sounds of "give me a 'F' " dared to echo through the stadium as freshmen struggled for recognition among the classes.

Each freshman experienced the problems of being an underclassman including the usual locker jams, overload of books, and ridicule of upperclassmen. His freshness wore off as he developed school pride and established his loyalty as a Golden Knight. Orientation, world history, and reading lab established the class of '73 academically as first year high school students.

A new achievement never before attempted proved the abilities of ambitious freshmen. Publishing the first frosh paper, "Knight Times," the class of '73 began a tradition for future classes.

(*above right) Finding coat, combination, and books too much to cope with, Don Huy suffers the newcomer's problems.
(*right) Meeting between classes, freshmen find a chance to strike up conversation with new friends before another class begins.

To be INdependent
To know the satisfaction
Of self-reliant
moments;

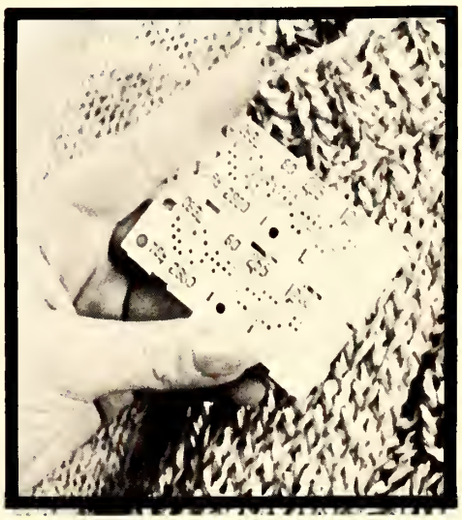

To meet the responsibility
Of an after-school job,
To feel briefly
The pride of ownership
Accompanying car keys.

To select friends
By individual standards,
To feel a growing need
To take on responsibilities,
To accept challenges
Of standing apart.

To form an opinion
Then to take a position
Upon the issues on which
Feelings are strong;
But to accept an offer
Of help with an open mind
As a growing young adult
In a changing world.

Mrs. Graub-
I have really enjoyed working in here this semester. I am only sorry that you weren't in here the same period I was! Well I'll be back next year (I'm not a sentimental senior) and maybe then our periods of being in the clinic will coincide!! I hope so.
Have a wonderful summer
Best of luck + happiness
Sherry Radtke

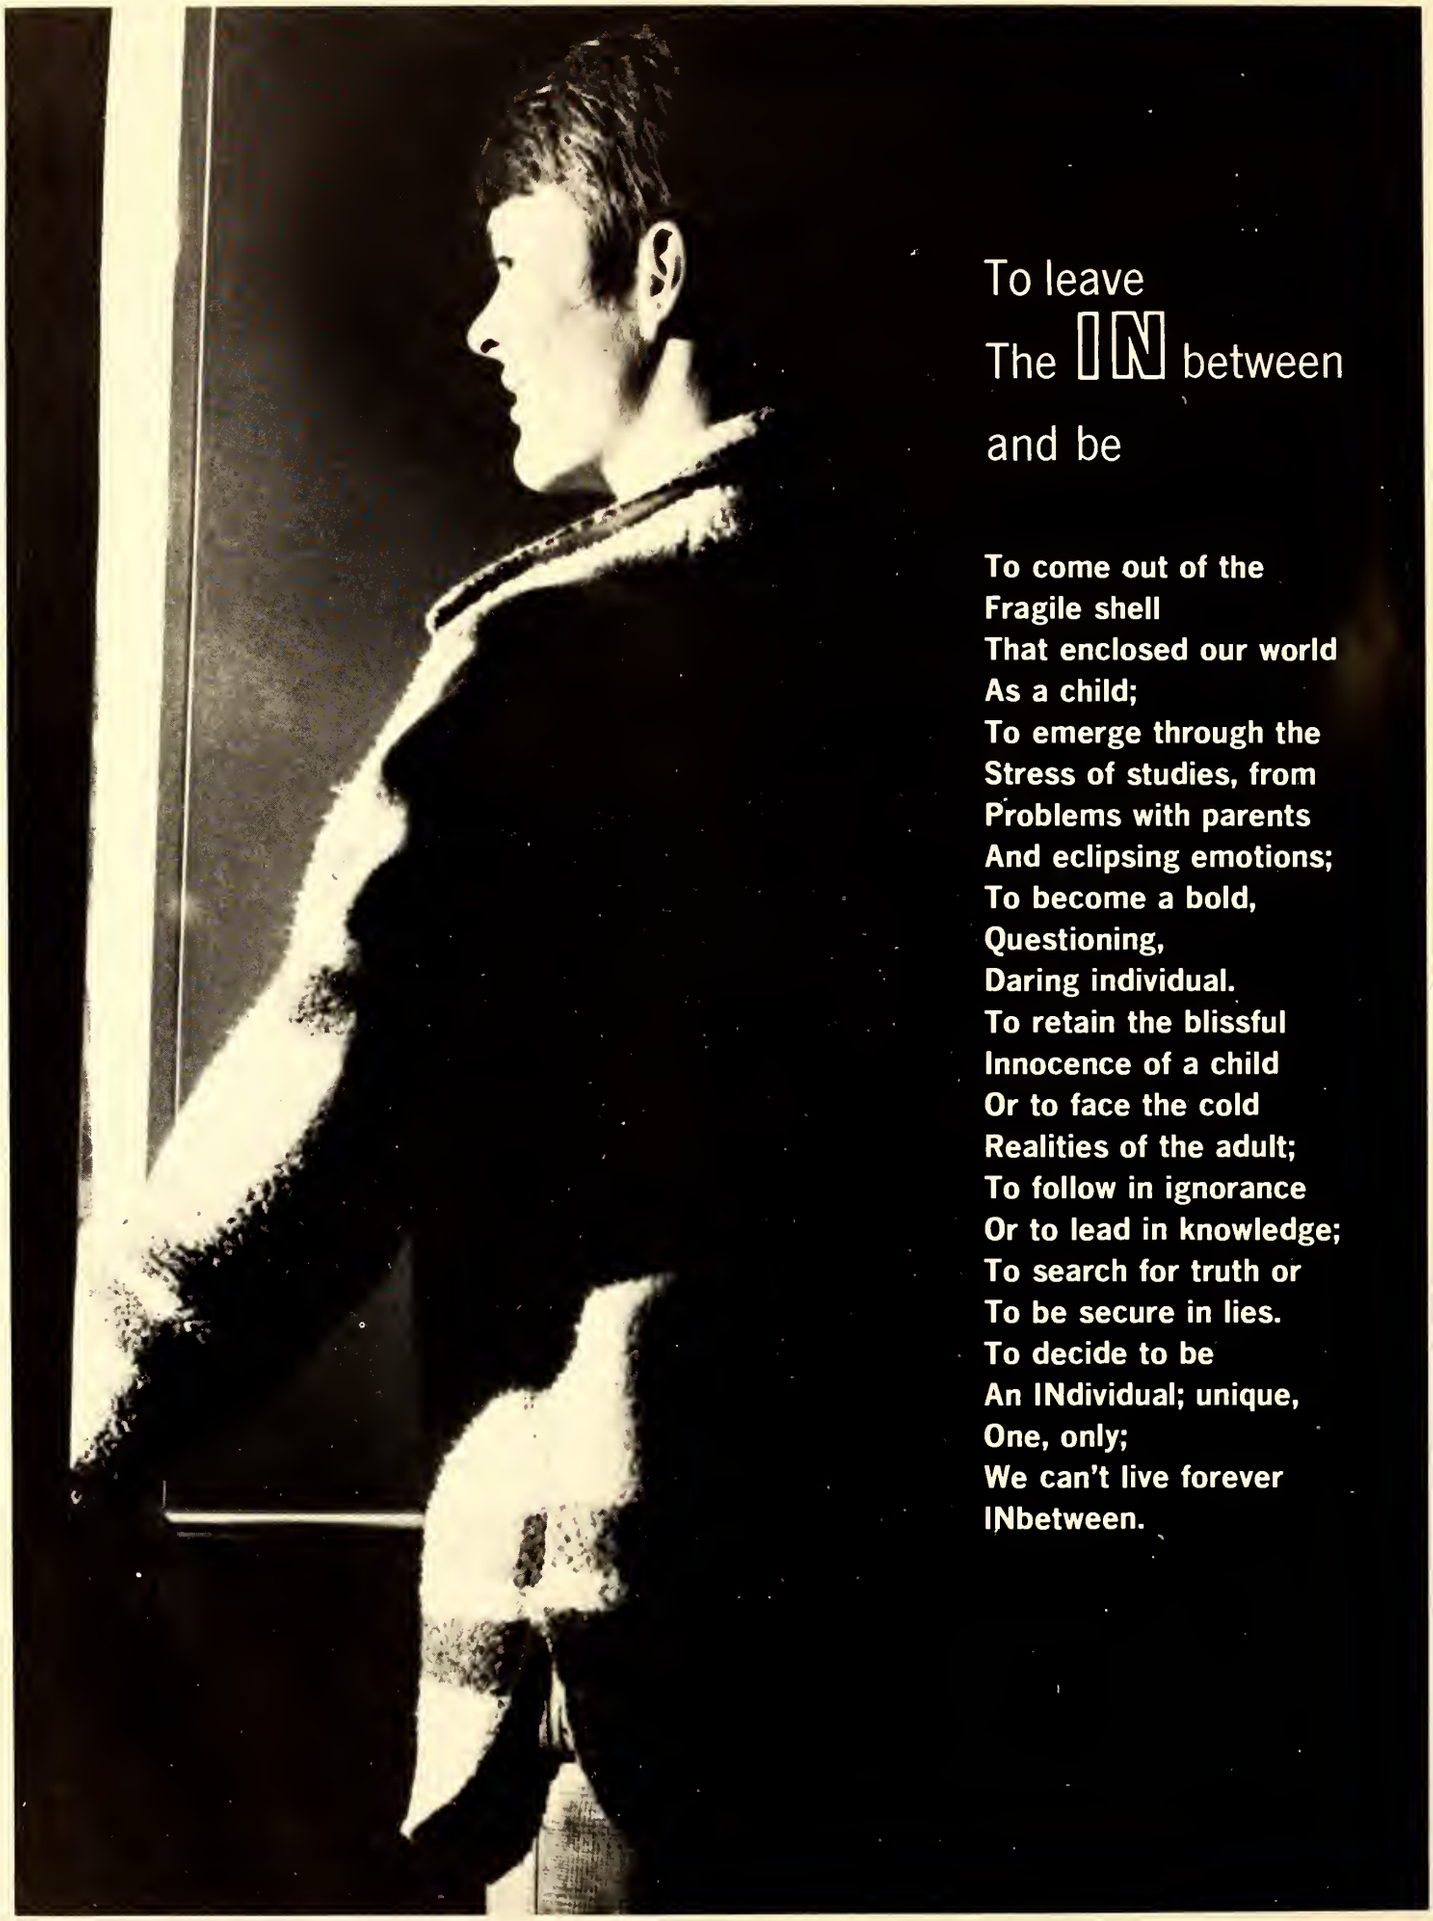

To be IN Doubt

To be In doubt,
To live in an aura
Of uncertainty,
To grasp concepts
Of two opposing views,
But to hesitate before
Claiming any as
One's own;
To interpret views
Of thousands of people
In judging what is right
And what is wrong, but
To see that answers
Lead only to
More searching . . .
and more questions.

Mrs. Graub-
To a nice person, hop
you stay that way. Ll
See you next year. have a good summer

To leave
The IN between
and be

To come out of the Fragile shell
That enclosed our world
As a child;
To emerge through the
Stress of studies, from
Problems with parents
And eclipsing emotions;
To become a bold,
Questioning,
Daring individual.
To retain the blissful
Innocence of a child
Or to face the cold
Realities of the adult;
To follow in ignorance
Or to lead in knowledge;
To search for truth or
To be secure in lies.
To decide to be
An INdividual; unique,
One, only;
We can't live forever
INbetween.
